[illegible] said that the [illegible] of a group of anti-Castro Cuban [illegible] who was interested in the overthrow of the Castro regime [illegible] and that it was his understanding the leaders of his group were planning a propaganda to be operated out of Miami [illegible] said that they plan to translate propaganda on student demonstrations [illegible] to Cuba. [illegible] also [illegible] to coordinate with guerrillas who are operating in the Cuban [illegible]. They believe that they can [illegible] these people by [illegible] and record the conversations [illegible]. The propaganda will then be translated into English and sent by VOA to the Embassies in the U.S. I listened to all of this and finally Mr. Fabrizio said that [illegible] would have to coordinate this with [illegible] for his final approval. I [illegible] Mr. that this was completely [illegible] and of an [illegible] and that we had nothing to do with Cuban broadcasts [illegible] and that it seemed to me that [illegible] would be the proper [illegible] for this to continue. [illegible] then said that they had already contacted the [illegible] that because of the fact that we had diplomatic relations with Cuba they [illegible] CIA cooperation. I [illegible] stated that this was not CIA's business and that [illegible] the relations with Cuba by the State Department.

[illegible] finally said that if they were able to meet [illegible] the guerrillas in the mountains of Cuba and they did obtain information [illegible] that they would [illegible] which [illegible] to the [illegible] to be [illegible] whether it would be [illegible] to broadcast inside the U.S. I [illegible] told Mr. Fabrizio that [illegible] the American way of [illegible], that this was a free country [illegible] with [illegible] and that the public [illegible], as far as I [illegible], [illegible] as long as they stayed within the law. I [illegible] Mr. [illegible] that if he [illegible] and [illegible] that [illegible] would be of [illegible] to the U.S. [illegible]
