

Lane Documents from Board Release of April 1996 Documents

Suggested Talking Points

7/2/96

- 1. These records provide more historical insight into the actions of the FBI and CIA following the assassination,*
 - 2. The American public deserves to have as complete a picture as possible of this tragic event.*
 - 3. The release of previously classified information, like that contained in these records, adds clarity to the picture.*
 - 4. It is not the Review Board's job to make judgments or characterize the records. The American public can make their own judgments about the information that becomes available.*
 - 5. It is our job to make the historical record surrounding the assassination as rich as possible; that's what the United States Congress mandated that the Board do.*
 - 6. The release of records such as these add additional historical context to the events following the assassination.*
- 7. In 1964, the FBI was monitoring the public appearances of Mark Lane, the most prominent Warren Commission critic, all over the United States, through the use of informants, during the Commission's investigation into the assassination of President.*
