Adding more information to what Mario gave in his Memo to A. Friday 25th, and correcting certain things of which Mario was not fully aware, I wish to say the following:

Individual 1: I met him for the first time 5 or 6 years ago, when I needed some lock work to be done in my Jewelry Store. I called the M. L. Key Shop over the telephone, and he was the individual who was sent over to do the work. In several other opportunities that I have needed lock work, I have called the same place over the telephone and he has always been the individual sent over to do the work. Right after we moved the office to the new location I called the key shop again to have two locks installed, and he was again sent over to install them. At that time I did not see him because when he came to do the work Gladys was the only one in the office and she received him. The last time I saw him was about three years ago when he did the last work in my jewelry store. I am pretty confident that he is not aware of my present connections and he surely believes that I am hundred per cent involved in the jewelry business. It is also my belief that prior to the recent operation he was neither connected with the same people we have been.

Individual 2: This individual was my first "contact" in 1960, introduced to me by Bender in New York. He was at that time in charge of what we used to call the "civilian part" of the operation. He left after the failure of the invasion and gave me a Post Office Box number in Washington, which I don't remember now. I wrote to him two or three friendly letters. The last time the letter was returned by the Post Office (I think the Box did not belong to him anymore). The last time I saw him was July 5, 1961, at the Hilton Hotel in Washington, when I was called to inform about how the rate of payments to the dependents of the brigaders had been established.

Individual 3: I never met this individual.

Individual 4: I met this individual at La Moderne Hotel in Miami around May or June 1960, being present in that meeting the members of the Cuban Democratic Revolutionary Front (Turned into C.R.C. afterwards). This individual was the interpreter between Bender and the members of C.D.R.F. After that meeting I saw him in two or three opportunities, but accidentally. When Joe Birley took charge as my "contact", this individual started to act as interpreter between Joe and I, but I was not pleased with the way he conducted himself as an interpreter and I asked Joe to substitute him. Mario started to act as interpreter ever since. The last time I saw him was in the last meeting he acted as interpreter between Joe and I.

Individual 5: This individual was a classmate of mine in the Havana High School around 1939, with whom I had nothing more than an acquaintance rather than a friendship. I have had no contact with him whatsoever ever since, and I think I saw him the last time having lunch in a restaurant in Miami, in which opportunity I just saw him but did not even say hello to him or spoke with him.

Individual 6: I have never met or seen this individual.
