1. One of the last of the UNADAGIO tapes, which is transmitted herewith, contained a passage (marked on the attachment) which [redacted] spotted as possibly referring to Rolando CUBELA (201-252234). Though transcriber UNOPAL has insisted that the first name which he heard was Fernando, [redacted] feels confident that the conversation is between a slightly intoxicated Antonio CARRILLO and CUBELA, with another person possibly also present. Unfortunately, maddening hammering noises make any full transcription here impossible. If the tape can be cleaned up at Headquarters, it may give additional insights into CUBELA's current attitudes. 2. CARRILLO is the rather thick-tongued individual who is initially heard making comments which include the illuminating remark ". . . es un soldado de carajo . . ." Slightly later he appears to say, "estás equivocado, ah, Rolando." CARRILLO continues after a sudden abrupt break in the shouting at the start of the passage. CUBELA's voice, which should be identifiable from other information available to Headquarters, is heard less often than CARRILLO's. 3. In further support of the thesis that CUBELA is CARRILLO's interlocutor, we note that the conversation takes place about half way through a reel which began at 1050 and ended at 1645 hours on 17 February. Reference submits evidence that CUBELA was at the [redacted] as of about mid day on 17 February for the purpose of having lunch with CARRILLO. 4. If retranscription of the tape at Headquarters should produce information of interest to this station, please send us a copy of the relevant material in Spanish or English. [redacted]
