Subject: Departure procedures

Phil was left alone in the office last night. He called me at home to ask what he should do. He said that he had tried calling others who live closer to the office than I, but was not able to reach anyone. Because we do not yet have any classified documents, I gave him my alarm number so that he could leave and so that I would not need to drive back in. (I presume that my number should be cancelled and that I should get another one.) In the future, it might be a good idea for us to tell others when we are leaving so that this does not happen again.
