Subject: Intern possibilities

I have received notice from a group of last year's group of students from Indiana that they will be coming here from May 20 to May 31. (David and I have discussed this and he knows that they were planning on coming.) They are doing this on their own initiative and footing the bill themselves. Before I go to David with the dates that they will be here, I would like to compile a list of projects that we can assign them. As team/project leaders, if you have anything that needs done, but you haven't the time, this would be a good opportunity. These students have worked with us before, are familiar with both the case and the ARRB, and have a year of college research behind them, so I anticipate that we can send them to LoC or College Park on research runs if need be, as well as give them more substantial projects in the office. This is as opposed to the high school students, who should be directly supervised and given projects that require only a surface knowledge of the case. I talked with some of you about this a couple of months ago; the things we discussed at that time should be thought out again now. There is one small glitch; as they were planning this, they have been telling me all along that they expected 4 or maybe 5 would be coming; now, they have said that 7 have committed to go-- 2 will be here for the first week only, and the other 5 will be here for 2 weeks. They caught me off guard when they upped the numbers, so I need extra projects. Can any of you help me? Please respond either by e-mail or stop by my office. Thanks a million.
