WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (UPI) -- The FBI has transferred an additional 10,119 pages of JFK documents to the National Archives and Records Administration, the bureau announced Friday. The documents, investigative files from the House Select Committee on Assassinations in 1978-79, will be made available to the public by the Archives' at its College Park, Md., facility beginning at 9 a.m. Oct. 2. The documents were transferred under the President John F. Kennedy Assassination Records Collection Act of 1992. Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas in 1963. The materials transferred to the Archives Friday dealt with the select committee's examination of various conspiracy theories, according to the FBI. Among them are the files on organized crime figure John Roselli, the bureau said. The release of some of the material transferred has been postponed, either to protect sensitive sources, such as informants on organized crime, or because the FBI is awaiting a go-ahead on specific items from another government agency or foreign government. The bureau has now transferred 651,000 pages of its JFK files, and will continue to transfer documents reviewed by the now-defunct select committee and identified by the Assassination Records Review Board as assassination records. By MELISSA WILLIAMS Associated Press Writer DALLAS (AP) -- For $25, you too can sit in the back of an open-top limousine making its way through Dealey Plaza, hear the crack of rifle fire as you glide past the Texas School Book Depository and feel the car speed up as it roars through the underpass toward Parkland Memorial Hospital. It's one of Dallas' newest tourist attractions built around the assassination of John F. Kennedy, and some say it's sick and exploitive. But that's not stopping visitors from taking the one-hour trip. "All my daughter had to do was tell me about it on the phone and I said, 'Sign me up,'" said Janice Ritting, 55, of Tacoma, Wash. The tour, thought up by Paul Crute, retraces the path of the presidential motorcade in a 1964 Lincoln restored to look like the 1963 model. Crute recreates the moment with piped-in sound effects and radio broadcasts from the day the president was shot. Crute, 34, gave up a career in sales to start the tour after seeing tourists wandering the assassination site. He makes maybe three trips on weekdays and eight a day during the weekend. "Being in touch with the fact that it is such an unhealed wound, that's kind of what motivated me to dream this up," he said. "It's sick," said Chuck DiDiovanni, a tourist from Chicago. "Let's not relive it again. It was a terrible time." Crute said no one who has taken the tour found it
