Subject: A non-record e-mail

As my impending move to Boston looms closer, I am contemplating many things; one of them is politics. From the news I read, things seem to be heating up for your guy right now, or perhaps just cooling off for Mr. K. At any rate, I have been thinking about politics again, and was wondering if I might be able to initiate discussions about joining forces with your candidate. Think they can use some part-time help from a grad student with an attitude who has four election cycles of experience and who has worked a gubernatorial campaign before, albeit in another state? I now expect that I will be arriving in Boston to stay by mid-August; I will be there for (hopefully) a short time in late July or early August to find a place to live, and could talk then. What do you think?
