Subject: Excellent late-breaking news

From a historical perspective, the crown jewels in the Robert White collection -- as far as we know -- are the 16 dictabelts of President Kennedy. In the first round of the deposition, I asked White how he came to possess them, whether he had any evidence that Evelyn Lincoln had ever paid for them, and how she came to acquire them. I also said that, pursuant to our subpoena, he should leave them with us, although we would not physically prevent his taking them. He took them with him. At the end of the deposition today, he announced that he had decided not to contest the issue further and that he had decided to donate them to the JFK Library. He sent over confirmation later that they had already been sent. I called Brad Gerratt and told him what had happened. He was very pleased and thanked us for our help.
