

NR_key_name: 4EB366062F879F76862563F400114256

SendTo:

CopyTo:

DisplayBlindCopyTo:

BlindCopyTo: CN=Eileen Sullivan/O=ARRB

From: Robalini @ aol.com

DisplayFromDomain:

DisplayDate: 12/01/1996

DisplayDate_Time: 9:17:02 PM

ComposedDate:

ComposedDate_Time:

Subject: Dot-Connecting and CIA Crack Part 3 of 3
THE ROMANIST DOT-CONNECTING and CIA Crack Part 3 of 3 11-30-1996 Will there be a real investigation of the CIA-crack link? Yeah, right. You're more likely to see Janet Reno guest star on a special one hour episode of Ellen as Ms. Degeneres new companion. Speaking of Miss Reno, when the acclaimed baby-killer was asked about a Justice Department investigation in the matter, she replied, with normal bureau speak non-logic, that she couldn't comment on matters in litigation, but we have conducted a preliminary inquiry of this matter, and found no evidence that supports the allegations made against the CIA. In other words, she couldn't talk about it because of some non-existent legal proceeding that isn't taking place, but, oh, what the hell, the story is bunk. Meanwhile, John Deutch, taking a page from Clinton's I feel your pain playbook, appeared at a town hall meeting in Watts on November 15, in what the L.A. Times cheered as a dramatic break with tradition. (Gee, it's amazing how charges of genocide can lead to such genuine concern in Langely. Maybe they aren't so bad after all.) In a straight man blank face that even Bob Newhart would admire, the Times described the South-Central audience as being skeptical. But the most amazing part of the article was this intellectual gymnastic feat: first Deutch tells the audience that there will be a complete investigation into the CIA-crack cocaine controversy, then he repeated the findings of a recent CIA internal investigation that concluded that there was no link between the CIA's efforts to help the Contras and Nicaraguans who were reported to have provided tons of cocaine to Rick Ross. Deutch then states finding no evidence of a conspiracy by the CIA to encourage drug trafficking from Latin America during this or any other period. In other words, there will be a full investigation, but there already has been a full investigation, and we've concluded we're innocent, so the case is closed. He couldn't have added, Fuck you, but that would have been too honest. Personally, I hope there are no further investigations of this scandal. I'd rather the government didn't even pretend to be shocked and create another manufactured charade. Better to leave us all hopelessly cynical, drowning in an enlightened form of apathy rather than the moronic stupor of one we are in now. And any alleged official investigation by any alleged independent commission should be called what it is: a Lucy Van Pelt Society, dangling a football of supposed reform for all those Charlie Brown's out there to dupe themselves into believing things have changed, only to fall on their sorry asses when the same dirty tricks are pulled. And to any Chuck Brown's out there, you deserve no better. No, I'd prefer if a spokesman for the Justice Department merely stated the following: Yes, all this well corroborated evidence is true. The CIA really is nothing more than drug dealing scum. However, we have decided to do nothing about it, because... well, let's face it,

Body:

recstat:

DeliveryPriority: N

DeliveryReport: B

ReturnReceipt:

Categories: