Subject: Party notice...

I should have written invitations by the end of the week, but in case my roommate hasn't finished them yet, I wanted to get notice out to everybody before the long weekend. I may have mentioned this to some of you in the past, but here's your "in-writing" notice...My roommates and I will be having a beginning of summer/welcome back softball season/flag day/ Jim Scott's birthday/Christopher's birthday/lots of good things have been happening to us lately party on Saturday evening, June 14. There will be food, beer, wine, non-alcoholic drinks, and hopefully, plenty of fun. For those who were around for my first couple of parties, let me assure you once again that I have settled down and there will be no more kegstands or public drunkenness - it's safe to attend. I won't be out of line. I will be inviting everybody from the office, but those of you on this list should consider yourselves specifically invited. Bring guests, friends, significant others, those-you-would-like-to-be-significant others, out of town visiting friends, and anyone else you wish. We have a big place and can accomodate a large group of people, and the invite list is approaching 100, so the more the merrier. The details will be shortly to follow, but until then, I wanted to be sure that everybody had at least a couple of weeks notice. Have a nice day. Void where prohibited. Must be 21 to enter.
