Morning News>2 indicted in DISD roof repair inquiry>>>New York Times>March 18, 1998>>Kennedys Still Seething Over Auction>>By DAVID ROHDE><snip>>NEW YORK -- The 49-year-old collector whose auction of John>F. Kennedy memorabilia has invoked the wrath of Kennedy's children>agreed Tuesday to turn over 21 Kennedy items of historical importance to>the National Archives.>>But the items at the core of the increasingly bitter dispute -->including the briefcase that Kennedy is believed to have had with him>the day he was assassinated -- remain among the 600 Kennedy items headed>for the auction block Wednesday afternoon.>>In an unusually blunt and emotional public plea Monday, the former>president's children, John F. Kennedy Jr. and Caroline Kennedy, asked>the collector, Robert White, a retired salesman of industrial cleaning>supplies, to return a handful of the president's personal items they>said belonged with his family.>>Those items, they said, include two volumes of the president's 1951>personal diary and the briefcase. They are considered to be some of the>most valuable items up for auction.><snip>><snip>>The items turned over to the National Archives include a small writing>table from the Oval Office that Kennedy used to sign letters, executive>orders and legislation. White also turned over three items that the>National Archives identified as containing national security>information.>>Twenty original documents were also turned over, including a telegram>from Lyndon Johnson congratulating Kennedy on his 1960 nomination
