He spoke for himself quite well.And he told me to "go ahead" with the posting of our very civil exchange. I expect to post the>>series on my own web site for convenience of readers.You WERE going to ask for my permisison to post my writings, weren't you?You may NOT have permission to post either my original "Mantik's Mistakes" nor my reply to Dr. Mantik with my biographical information. You may NOT reproducethem without specific permisison from the copyright holder. That is me. If youwould like your visitors to see them, you may point them to my Web site. Youmay NOT re-distribute those two works of mine. (Please refer to currentcopyright law and the Berne Convention - those works ARE, indeed, inherentlycopyrighted.)>>I have taken sharp exception to Clint's posting now because it violated>>our agreement.You can ONLY cite any informal agreement as it applies to YOUR writings. Dr.Mantik already told me to go ahead and post his letters. Would you like meto remove your writings on my site's Zapruder page? - Clint BradfordUnanswered questions posed to Fetzer...1. Why does my dialogue with Mantik irritate you?2. What did I post of yours that was embarassing to you?3. You refuse to take Mantik and I up on an Errata page...just how ethicalis THAT for an Editor to dismiss the wishes of his authors when they desireto clarify issues and correct errors?4. And, of course, the REAL bottom ethical line: here YOU are - sending toscores of recipients - the SAME messages you publicly denounce me forposting. - Clint
