The boats were described as an 8-foot vessel named "Walt" and a speed-boat named "Daggle". The subject is the former Chief of the Cuban Air Force under Castro, who broke with Castro in 1958 and who has been active in anti-Castro endeavors. Marcos Diaz Lora is his brother.

The above-mentioned group includes Marcos Diaz Lora, Carlos Garcia, Fernando Cabana, and other unidentified Cuban exiles, as well as Frank Anthony Sturgis, a United States citizen who has been involved in numerous Cuban revolutionary enterprises. Sturgis is more commonly known as Frank P. [unclear]. The group plans to carry automatic rifles and machine guns.

After arriving at Cay Sal, a small contingent of the group reportedly will leave on the "Daggle" for a destination and objective in Cuba which are unknown to the informant.

The informant subsequently advised on October 27, 1962, that the foregoing plans were delayed because of the failure of Cuba to deliver money needed for electrical repairs aboard the "Walt". The informant stated that the group was still active in pushing the plans in the event of such as possible.
