[redacted], a cotton broker of Atlanta, Georgia who was closely associated with Francisco Gualberto Cajigas y Garcia Del Prado, Miami, Florida, civilian leader of the Cuban Unity of Liberation (UCL) (105-88041), furnished information to Miami Office Agents on 9/12/60. Cajigas had told Fernandez that Father Medina, Rector of Villanueva University, Havana, arrived in Miami from Havana, on 9/5/60, for the purpose of contacting Cajigas and offering him the help and resources of the Catholic Church in Cuba in his fight against Castro. [redacted] that, according to Cajigas, Father Medina advised that the Catholic Church in Cuba was opposed to Manuel Antonio Varona of the FRD. Father Medina also disclosed to Cajigas that Manuel Artime, one of the five leaders of the FRD, had visited Medina and had confided that the FRD was divided and unhappy. U

The MRR, an underground movement formed in Cuba in mid-1959, was composed primarily of three larger groups: (1) the ACU, under Manuel F. Artime Buesa; (2) a military group under Major Ricardo de la Lorie Valls; and (3) an air group, without planes, of 13 experienced pilots under Major Antonio Michel Yabor. The ACU was in existence prior to the Castro regime as the Cuban Catholic University (CACU) students organization. In November, 1959, under Artime's leadership, the majority of the CACU membership joined with the Rebel Army Officer group to become the MRR. In February, 1950, a coordinated movement of anti-Castro exiles outside Cuba was formed in Mexico and named the MRR. Artime and Lorie were joint heads of this newly formed group. About the middle of 1960, Artime, who was in the US, reportedly began to act without authority from the MRR Directorate, which resulted in formation of the MRR splinter group, Miami Office report dated 4/30/63, set out information indicating that during January, 1963, some MRR (97-4133) functionaries participated in unity discussions with other Cuban revolutionary organizations. The MRR problem was complicated by the recent return to the US from imprisonment in Cuba, of Manuel Artime Buesa, MRR leader who had participated in the April, 1961 invasion attempt. In late January, 1963, Jose Miro Cardona, head of the CRC, tried to overthrow the MRR leadership of Artime. Miami report dated 3/19/64, set out activities of Manuel Artime Buesa as head of the MRR. This included Artime's travels between the US and Nicaragua and Costa Rica; his recruiting activities in behalf of his anti-Castro training program and including a number of Cuban exiles recruited out of the US Army for service with his group; the alleged grand style of living of Artime and his followers; and his operation of training camps in Nicaragua where he reportedly had more than five million dollars worth of military equipment. It was alleged that Artime was being officially sponsored and subsidized and that he made a living out of the revolution. In early 1964, when the Pro-Referendum Committee was polling the Cuban exiles for a Cuban referendum election to be held in May, Artime was reported to be against this referendum. Reference also set out information reported on 2/12/64 that Adelaida Padron Cruz, 881 N.E. 71st Street, Miami, continued to be Artime's mistress and that this residence was used by him for secret meetings.

Cuban exiles were saying that the US was providing a steady flow of aid to the MRR which was led by Manuel Artime Buesa. Some exiles claimed that the MRR attack on Puerto Pilon in May, 1964, was launched from the Dominican Republic. There was no evidence that Artime was receiving support from the Venezuelan Government. His failure to establish personal contact with the Venezuelan Administration during his 5/22-27/64 visit to Caracas, had provoked criticism in government circles. In early October, 1964, the Alliance of the MRP - SFNE (105-112098) - Alpha 66 Cuban exile group was planning to initiate armed action in Cuba and its paramilitary organization had been moved from the US (place not indicated) to prepare for infiltration of Cuba. Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo, military leader of the Alliance, had issued strict instructions that there should be no collaboration at any level with the MRR or the JURE during the process of infiltration. Gutierrez had no faith in the ability or willingness of Manuel Artime or Manuel Ray to adhere to a joint infiltration program. Once in Cuba, however, limited tactical collaboration would be encouraged. (S)(u)

A delegation of the MRR, headed by Artime, was expected to arrive in Caracas in early October to seek support from the Venezuelan Government (S)(u)

Robert Dennis Arrington (105-96912) of Los Angeles, a US citizen, who had entered Nicaragua on 12/8/64, was arrested by Nicaraguan officials on 12/17/64 for alleged possession of illegal arms and plotting the overthrow of the Nicaraguan Government. He had come to the attention of Nicaraguan authorities when he tried to make contact in Managua with anti-Castro Cubans in an attempt to interest them in buying the arms he was carrying. In Managua, at the Gran Hotel (date not indicated) Arrington met an unnamed Cuban who promised to take him to see Manuel Artime who was expected momentarily; however, this Cuban never came back to see Arrington.

Foregoing information on Artime is covered in the following references:

At the request of the Department of State the Bureau conducted an investigation of an attack on the Spanish vessel "Sierra Aranzazu" (2-1877) on 9/13/64, off the eastern tip of Cuba. It was alleged that this attack was carried out by representatives of a group receiving US backing, known as the MRR and headed by Manuel Artime. The Secret Organization of Continental Action (OSAC) initially claimed responsibility for the attack. Newspaper accounts indicated that Artime denied responsibility for the raid and in a statement from Panama suggested the Castro government was responsible in an attempt to discredit the MRR. On 5/20/65, Nilo Messer, 27 N.W. 47th Street, Miami, advised that he had been Manuel Artime Buesa's secretary and as such traveled thousands of miles with Artime in the US, South America and Europe. He said that he was planning to leave this secretarial position and had obtained another job.

On 7/23/65, [redacted] a Cuban exile who traveled frequently in Central America, advised that Artime continued as head of the MRR (97-4133). About two weeks previously both [redacted] and Artime were in Nicaragua. However, the MRR then had no offices or operations in that country. [redacted] heard from Cuban exiles in Nicaragua that the MRR reportedly had two unidentified airplanes available to them in Panama. However, there was no indication that the MRR planned any raids against Cuba either by using these planes or an operation by sea. (S)(u)

General Luis Somoza in Nicaragua told [redacted] that Artime's operations there had been eliminated almost completely because of the US Government's attitude toward the MRR. (S)(u)

[redacted] indicated on 8/10/65, [redacted] had been visited in his home, on both the preceding Friday and Saturday, by Cuban revolutionary Manuel Artimes. [redacted] that Artimes was a friend of General Somoza, Chief Director of the Nicaraguan National Guard, and of source's sister-in-law, Mrs. Yolanda de Corrales; also, that Artimes knew source's brother-in-law, Lt. Gumberto Corrales, Assistant to General Somoza. Artimes, who had been unable to contact President Robles, asked source to confidentially inform the President that a conspiracy was being planned for the purpose of assassinating the Presidents of Nicaragua, Costa Rica and the RP. Files of the 470th INTC Group, Fort Amador, Canal Zone, revealed background data on Manuel F. Artimes Buesa, born 1/29/32, Camaguey Province, Cuba. His father was shown as Manuel Artimes F. and his mother as Otilia B. de Artimes. It was suspected that Artimes wanted to meet President Robles to obtain from him a letter of introduction, for unknown reasons, to Jack Vaughan, former US Ambassador to RP and present US Assistant Secretary of State.

It was in Miami that she met her second husband, Ernesto Martinez Dominguez, where they both were active in the anti-Castro group of Manuel Arttime Buesa who was a personal friend of hers. At the meetings of this group, she gave first aid classes for a period of two weeks in 1963. In October, 1965, Montano and her husband made a trip to Cuba in an effort to bring relatives out of Cuba. While there, she was approached by the Cuban Government to engage in intelligence activities in the US on behalf of Cubans. Included with information she was expected to report was any information concerning Arttime and his activities. In Cuba, she was introduced to a man named "Orlando" whom she recognized as a man who was in Miami during 1962 and 1963, working with Arttime's group. She and her husband departed Cuba for Miami on 11/8/65.
