In this connection, the Marcello case is of particular interest. A final order of deportation had been entered against Marcello but this fact was being held in strictest confidence since Immigration felt they had to deport M immediately to a nearby country to prevent Marcello's attorney from instituting court action to delay such deportation. Gen. Swing said he already secured authority from Formosa to deport M there but in view of the distance and the difficulty of transportation, Gen. Swing was negotiating with Guatemala to have that country accept Marcello."
