Re Havana letter dated January 23, 1959, captioned as above, and Havana letter February 19, 1959, captioned MEETING OF HOODLUMS, APALACHIN, NEW YORK, 11/14/57, A-R.

After the overthrow of the Batista Government on January 1, 1959, all gambling casinos in Havana were closed until February 19, 1959, on which date they received permission to reopen.

On February 10, 1959, PCI ALBERTO SUAREZ ALEMAN (CONCEAL), doorman at Calle 12 No. 20, building in which subject resides, advised that subject continues to maintain his apartment in the building but is staying there only infrequently. (u)

On February 13, 1959, PCI GUIDO DE PHILLIPS (CONCEAL), former bodyguard for SANTO TRAFFICANTE, advised that on that date there had been a meeting of many members of the Italian gambling element in Havana for the purpose of discussing means of reopening the gambling casinos. Source noted that SANTO TRAFFICANTE was present at that meeting. (u)

On February 16, 1959, PCI DE PHILLIPS informed that apparently the Revolutionary Government would not allow SANTO TRAFFICANTE to continue as the operator of the gambling casino in the Sans Souci night club. Source stated that the new Cuban Government apparently is aware of TRAFFICANTE's former close relationship with ROBERTO FERNANDEZ MIRANDA, brother-in-law of ex-President FULGENCIO BATISTA. Source said that FIDEL CASTRO had asked ERROL FLYNN, movie actor, to suggest someone who might be able to take over the Sans Souci gambling casino. FLYNN reportedly sent a telegram to an individual named RON WARNOCK, P. O. Box 152, Marysville, Washington, telephone OLive 9-4328. Source said that WARNOCK is a punchboard operator in the Washington-Oregon area. WARNOCK, according to source, came to Havana and had the backing of some wealthy individuals in Marysville, as well as another unidentified group in Chicago, Illinois. (u)

Source noted, however, that the Sans Souci was running into substantial difficulty because of failure to pay many of its employees during the time the night club was closed and that, unless, some action was taken in the immediate future, it appeared that the night club might close. (C)(u) cube

On April 1, 1959, HAV-31 stated that SANTO TRAFFICANTE has an interest in a restaurant known as the Embers Club, located across the street from the Hotel Havana Hilton in Havana. According to Mrs. TRAFFICANTE, a daughter of TRAFFICANTE will be married in Cuba within the next two months. Source noted that the Sans Souci night club is closed and that the Comodoro casino may close shortly. Source related that TRAFFICANTE is presently attempting to reopen the Deauville Casino but is having difficulty in making an agreement with Cuban employees. (C)(u)
