informant. Informant paid his respects to STEVE and was introduced to the men at STEVE's table but could not recall their names. The informant then proceeded to VINCENT SCRO's and CHARLES MONTANA's tables and subsequently to his own. Informant stated that there were no speeches and the purpose of the stag was to raise money for the prospective son-in-law. CHARLES MONTANA advised the informant that 500 tickets had been sold at $5 each and approximately 260 people were in attendance at the party.

At approximately 10:15 p.m. the informant decided to leave and approached VINCENT SCRO's table in order to express his regrets at having to leave his party. At this time VINCENT SCRO determined from the informant that it was 10:15 p.m. and VINCENT glanced toward STEVE. STEVE stood up at which time all those in attendance ceased their activities and preparation began for STEVE MAGADDINO's departure. According to the informant two groups of men left the cafe one group going north and the other south and each group examined the block prior to MAGADDINO's departure. Shortly thereafter two more groups of men left and took positions on both sides of the door and on the curbing which separated the street traffic from the door of the cafe. At this point PAT NATARELLI and JAMES LA DUCA left the cafe walked west and took positions near the parking lot. SAM RANGATORE, the chauffeur for STEVE and another young Italian man had left the cafe and walked toward the parking lot. RANGATORE ordered the younger man to start the car and bring it to the edge of the parking lot. It is the informant's opinion that this was done in that if the automobile had a bomb in it the younger man was more expendable than RANGATORE or MAGADDINO. Subsequently MAGADDINO came out of the door supported by FRED RANDACCIO who was holding his left arm and VINCENT SCRO who was on his right. According to the informant it is apparent that SCRO and RANDACCIO are in solid with the old man. Just before MAGADDINO entered his Cadillac, he called the informant over and told him good bye and said he would see him this week.

Informant will attempt to secure names of individuals sitting at the head tables.

As previously reported, informant purchased three tickets to this affair. Informant made available one of the tickets which his being retained in the 1A Section of 92-337 La Cosa Nostra.
