It has been alleged that Bernard Spindel knows of the location in Puerto Rico of 80 million dollars in gold bullion which had been transported from Haiti and had been concealed in Puerto Rico.

It was subsequently alleged that Spindel advised that the amount of gold bullion was not 80 million dollars but was a total of seven million dollars. Spindel has repeatedly indicated an interest in locating this gold and attempting to steal it. He contacted a source, who advised him that through his, the source's, political affiliations in Washington, he could make arrangements for this gold to be turned over to the United States Government at which time he, the source, and Spindel would receive a monetary reward from the government. The source told Spindel he was not interested in this matter unless Spindel could positively prove to him beyond any doubt that he knew the exact location of the hiding place of this gold.
