The MDC is not highly organized. A basic organization exists in all provinces with Camaguey the best organized having a membership of 600-1,000. The Santiago de Cuba organization is headed by Laureano GARROTE Jr., broker, and Lic. Guillermo MARTINEZ. The Santiago organization has its political sights pointed primarily at the campesinos, labor, and students. The MDC has an organization of twelve students at the University of Oriente and can count limited strength in the teachers' organization. However, at this time the MDC has no means of reaching other students except through word of mouth. No plans exist at this time for publishing MDC propaganda. However, in the future the MDC in Habana plans to mimeograph selected articles and send them to the provincial organizations for distribution. The local MDC is looking for a person or avenue which they can use to reach the campesinos and labor.

3. MDC representatives have travelled to most countries of Europe and some countries of South America to study Christian Democratic movements wherever they have existed to learn the modus operandi of those movements and to capitalize on their experience.
4. The MDC realizes that it must be very careful in its actions having already been attacked by Prime Minister CASTRO. The MDC will do everything possible to avoid being connected with counter-revolutionary groups so that they cannot be classed in the same category as BATISTA elements.
5. The above information was received from [redacted] who is under development by the writer. [redacted] is pro-US having received his education in the United States. As a representative or broker, most of his business has come from US firms. He is now affiliated with a US firm in Habana.
6. None of the above information has been placed on a "mat" on the assumption that most of it has already been reported by the Habana Station.
