be The information contained in the documents provided by the source and the information secured from him in debrickings have been established as accurate by comparing the data with those which the bias received through other reliable channels.

c. The CUIS does not know the full extent of the information provided by the defector.

d. has made portions of the information received from the defector available to each of the countries affected and has encouraged each country to take appropriate measures to defend Itself against Cuban subversion and against its own nationals who, in conjunction with the Cubans, are plotting against it. agen

It is the hope of that the interested governments will treat the information as sensitive and that Latin American diplomats to whom the Chief of may furnish the tuformation will use due care in forwarding it to their own countries. At the same time, it is loped that the latin American diplomats will urge their respective governments to act upon the information and that, realizing the threat posed by Cuba, they will take such action as is appropriate in their own spheres of influence to emphasize the threat that Cuba represents to the free world.

The attached report was prepared with the intention of having it presented in the Organization of American States but this proposal has been abandoned b cause of objections raised by the Government of Mexico. Nonetheless, the Fexican

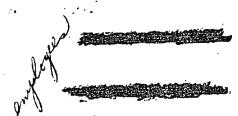

Government did say that it does not oppose bi-lateral discussions between and each of the countries concerned.

34 It is suggested that the make available to the Chief one copy of the Spanish and one copy of the English version for his ready reference. If he wishes to make copies available to a Latin American diplomat for passage to his own country, Headquarters clearance should be obtained before copies are furnished. This is because Headquarters is end avoring to make appropriate arrangements for passage of the paper through other channels. It is believed, therefore, that the most appropriate use of the material would be as background for discussion with andividual representatives of latin American countries. However, there is no objection to its being used as a basis for their comments or reports to their own governments.

may make concerning the material itself or concerning the reaction of those individuals with whom he discusses it.
