1. The attachment was passed to us by SMACT/1. SMARE prefers to make their inquiry through us in order to hold down the possibility of a news leak regarding William Martin's potential trip to SMADD. The last thing the SMADDS want is for this item to hit the papers. SMACT/ says the foreign minister would prefer that no visit take place. Until the latter learns more definitively from LNHARP authorities whether or not Martin would be subject to extradition he will reply to questions - should the proposed visit be leaked - that he has "no information." Meanwhile he would appreciate receiving LNHARP opinion as to Martin's current status in law. 2. Please advise. John W. William Martin

The Canadian Press Correspondent in Moscow, William Buckley, approached our Embassy informally in the middle of December on behalf of William Martin, the ex-employee of NSA who defected to the Soviet Union in 1960.

According to Buckley, Martin wishes to see his parents for compassionate reasons and wants to know if he would be admitted to Canada without fear of extradition to the United States if he were to arrange a rendez-vous with his parents in Vancouver. We do not know whether Martin still has a United States passport or whether he has become a Soviet citizen. In any event Martin considers himself inadmissible to the United States.

Buckley met Martin at the apartment of Howard Kausch, the Moscow correspondent for McGraw-Hill Publications. In addition Martin later telephoned Buckley to indicate his interest in finding out whether or not he could come to Canada. Buckley assumes, quite rightly I would think, that the manner in which Martin has made his request indicates that his Russian hosts are aware of his interest in getting out of the Soviet Union to see his parents.

We have informed our Embassy that it should take no action to encourage Buckley or Martin to believe that a visa would be granted if Martin were to make formal application. Since, however, Martin's interest in coming to Canada is already in a newspaperman's hands, we cannot rule out the possibility that Buckley might write about Martin's interest. Such a story would probably lead to the need for an expression of the Canadian Government's attitude. In making recommendations on the kind of response that might be made in the event that a question is put to my Minister, it would be most useful to know what Martin's status in law is so far as the United States is concerned. If, for example, your Government could not take legal action, the Canadian authorities would be in a position in this latter case to public attention to say that they were not aware of any barrier preventing Martin from seeing his parents in the United States. I should be most grateful if through your channels we could be provided informally with an indication of Martin's status in law in the United States.

Buckley's only other comment on Martin was that he didn't really know what to make of Martin. Martin seemed outspoken in dealing with the shortcomings of life in the Soviet Union. On the other hand he spoke with a slight stammer and seemed nervous. Buckley's view for what it is worth is that Martin is not interested in getting into trouble with the Russians or doing anything which they might consider underhanded. I should emphasize that no member of the Canadian Embassy has had any direct contact with Martin.
