This information was obtained from Dave [redacted] of OTR/ALE, the staff psychologist who assessed SIMAN/T/1 for one day last October. It is raw psychological testing data and not necessarily significant out of context with other evaluation methods, although it may be helpful in giving a rough idea of SIMAN's outstanding characteristics-it should be remembered that the constructs below only represent or define the relationship between SIMAN and T/1 as seen by T/1-not necessarily reality. T/1 was asked to write out a set of descriptions of himself and then was ~~asked~~ ~~asked~~ was asked to name the persons who had filled certain roles in his life or whom he had various types of contact with. SIMAN was named by T/1 as the person "who was the brother closest to your age or the person who played the role of your brother". T/1 was then asked to determine whether or not the persons he had named fitted or did not fit the descriptions he had written of himself and of what he considered important characteristics.

The constructs are listed below with the first construct applying to SIMAN and the opposite construct listed as "vs."

- 1.E.....
- A. SIMAN was seen by T/1 as dedicated to his work and of high integrity
vs.
somewhat chiseling, crooked, unidealistic (N,S,F)
  - B. SIMAN was seen as nervous when raising touchy or delicate issues
vs.
Self-assured even when discussing area not knowledgeable about (Sy,F)
  - C. Seen as of artistic temperament, inclined to be highly imaginative vs.
Very thorough about work, leaving no details to chance (S,F)
  - D. Seen as greatly interested in engineering and math
vs.
More interested in literature and art (None)
  - E. Interested in politics and economics which he dissected objectively
vs.
Interested in organizing pleasurable experiences (N,S,Sy)
  - F. Simple, honest and wholly truthful
vs.
Covers deficiencies with extravagant boasts and promises. (N,F)
  - G. Always has big plans or goals which rarely materialize
vs.
Chose a goal early in life and worked hard for its completion (Sy,S)
