a 7 November reception provide further evidence that Soviet leaders contemplate a period of relative inaction and consolidation while they assess the effects of Cuban crisis on USSR's world position and study the future course of US policy.

(c) (Unclassified) An Associated Press release from Havana states, "Cuban officials insist that no Cuban merchant vessels will submit to inspection of any kind, diplomatic sources reported tonight. The reported Cuban position raised the possibility of US-Cuban confrontations on the high seas. The diplomatic informants added that Cuban ships were said to have received orders not to stop for inspection no matter what the consequences may be. No Cuban ocean-going ship was known to be enroute to Cuba at this time."

b. Indications

No significant change since SITREP 19-62.
