

10 September 1963

<sup>05</sup>
[Jose CASAS Rodriguez]

1. About 1500 hours, 10 September 1963, [CASAS Rodriguez] was called at his place of work (Engineering firm: [Gannett, Fleming, Corddry and Carpenter, Inc., 600 N. 2nd St., Harrisburg, Pa. Tel: [238-0451]) by Mr. [PAULMORT], and advised that [PAULMORT] would like to visit him and would arrive at [CASAS] house between 2000 and 2100 hours that evening. [CASAS] agreed. [PAULMORT] had previously visited [CASAS] in May 1963.

2. In accordance with the telephone conversation, [PAULMORT] accompanied by Mr. [HICKLSON] arrived at [CASAS] house shortly after 2000 hours, 10 September.

3. During the initial greetings, in response to the general query "how's the work getting along?", [CASAS] replied that he was very busy now because of a special assignment in which he was dealing with a Costa Rican engineer visiting Harrisburg in connection with an engineering project in which [CASAS] firm was involved with the Costa Rican government. This assignment was to continue until the engineer left at the end of the month. [CASAS] had, in fact, just returned from having a few social beers with the Costa Rican.

4. Following the conclusion of general amenities and the dispersal of various of the six offspring, [PAULMORT] explained to [CASAS] the purpose of our visit. [CASAS] conceded that he knew AZCUE well and that he would like to help both AZCUE and ourselves, but that he was not the man for this sort of activity. It was clearly and repeatedly explained to [CASAS] that his task was simple and without danger. He would be watched by our people at all times. When surveillance determined that AZCUE was physically approachable, [CASAS] would simply greet him as an old friend, and most likely a normal friendly conversation would ensue. During the course of general talk, [CASAS] could perhaps recall AZCUE's former statements in which he praised Americans, although, perhaps because of his official position, castigated the Pentagon. [CASAS] could then perhaps ask AZCUE if he was really aware of the mess awaiting him in Cuba. If AZCUE was interested in helping both the Cuban people and himself, [CASAS] could help AZCUE by arranging an introduction with an American who could be of great assistance. If AZCUE said no, that would be the end of it. [CASAS] could play it by ear. Very simple and no risk to [CASAS]. The only danger would be to AZCUE should the Cuban learn of [CASAS] approach; therefore as a protection to AZCUE, absolute secrecy must be maintained by [CASAS]. Although [CASAS] admitted the simplicity of his part of the job, he stated that Cubans were not capable of keeping their traps shut, and that unfortunately he was no exception, even though he realized that the safety of his friend depended on his keeping silent.

5. It was clearly explained to <sup>05</sup>CASAS that we would pay his travel expenses and compensate him well for his time and effort. Although he professed little interest in the payment, it was evident that the idea of some extra money, as well as a trip to Mexico City (where he has relatives) appealed greatly to him. He left us for a few minutes to consult with his wife. She apparently left the decision entirely to him.

6. As to <sup>05</sup>CASAS' employers, he felt that he could probably get a few days off. He was instructed to give some excuse such as family illness, rather than tell his chief that he was to do a job for the U.S. Government. (In reply to <sup>03</sup>PAULMORT's query, <sup>06</sup>CASAS replied that his chief was a retired colonel named <sup>06</sup>HALLOCK, and described <sup>06</sup>HALLOCK thus: "a businessman - you know - he likes to make money.") Depending on the outcome of his request for a couple days' leave of absence, <sup>05</sup>CASAS finally agreed to go to Mexico, although he again said that he did not feel that he was fit for this sort of job.

7. At our request, <sup>05</sup>CASAS agreed to try to get off the following day, Wednesday, 11 September, and fly to Washington in order to go through the necessary steps with I&NS. If he could not leave his job on Wednesday, he would try for Thursday. He was given the sterile HQS number <sup>06</sup>7378294 and instructed to ask for Mr. <sup>03</sup>WIKELSON, (This had of course previously been arranged at HQS.) <sup>05</sup>CASAS was to call before 1130 hours on Wednesday, advising us of the time of his arrival in Washington and his flight, so that he could be met. If for some reason he was unable to get through to us, we would call him after 1130 hours at his place of work.

8. <sup>03</sup>PAULMORT and <sup>03</sup>WIKELSON departed Casa <sup>05</sup>CASAS about 2200 hours.
