US citizen, free-lance writer and part time sugar broker.

Source speaks Spanish, has resided at intervals in Cuba since youth, has had contacts for many years among Cubans in the sugar business, and knows personally many present and former Cuban political and administrative personalities. Source lived in Havana during the entire calendar year 1959, working with the [Sugar Stabilization Institute] and collecting material for an analysis of developments in Cuba since Fidel Castro's victory.

I have just learned from some of my Cuban friends that the days of the Democratic Revolutionary Front are numbered and that new political alignments are going to appear. Specifically, Mario Cardenas is going to go to Cuba and head up a "government in being" inside Cuba (this jibes with recent newspaper dispatches to that effect) and that he is also going to act as a "co-ordinator" between the "left-wing" forces of Rufo Lopez Fresquet and the "right-wing" forces of Antonio de Varona. The initiative for this shift in alignments, the purpose of which is to end what is regarded as fruitless bickering among exiled Cubans and to set up an actual government within Cuba, is said to have come from Rufo. Incidentally, Rufo is drinking even more heavily than usual and is absolutely incapable of keeping his mouth shut about anything.
