- In July 1964 a Cuban refugee who was a high-level Cuban government 6. commercial representative in the Western Hemisphere and whose bonafides were established on the basis of preliminary interviews and debriefings, said that he met Rogelio TAMAYO in MINCEX in early 1962 when TAMAYO was the Assistant Manager of Economics in Cubazucar. In late 1962 or early 1963 TAMAYO was assigned to London where he worked with Juan PERIS as a representative for Cubazucar. Source believed that TAMAYO represented other MINCEX enterprises, but was not certain which ones. Prior to TAMAYO's assignment to London, he made frequent trips to Communist countries. Source described TAMAYO as having been born about 1937, being five feet nine inches tall, 140 pounds, white, having black, curly hair, light brown eyes, and acne marks on his face. He liked to call himself "El Caballo."
