MEMORANDUM

This reconstruction of Agency involvement in plans to assassinate Fidel Castro is at best an imperfect history. Because of the extreme sensitivity of the operations being discussed or attempted, as a matter of principle no official records were kept of planning, of approvals, or of implementation. The few written records that do exist are either largely tangential to the main events or were put on paper from memory years afterward. William Harvey has retained sheletal notes of his activities during the years in question, and they are our best source of dates. Dr. Edward Gunn, of the Office of Medical Services, has a record of whom he met and when and cryptic references to the subjects discussed. Ray Treichler, of TSD, has a record of two or three dates that are pertinent. Gunn and Treichler were involved in only the technical aspects of operational planning, and their participations were shortlived. Although fragmentary, their records are a help in establishing critical time frames. Operational files are useful in some instances. because they give dates of meetings, the substances of which may be inferred from collateral information.

For the most part, though, we have had to rely on information given to us orally by people whose memories are fogged by time.

Their recollections of dates are particularly hazy, and some of them

SCENET EYES BHLY

are no longer able to keep the details of one plan separate from those of eaother. We interviewed everyone whom we could identify as likely to be knowledgeable, with the exceptions of Hr. Dulles and General Cabell. A complete list is attached at Tab A. We did not go on fishing expeditions among the mere possibles. To have done so would have risked making witting a number of employees who were previously unvitting and, in our estimate, would have added little to the details available from those directly involved. There are inconsistencies among the various accounts, but most of them can be resolved by collating the information furnished by all of the identifiable participants in a particular plan and by then checking it against specific dates that can be fixed with fair certainty. We believe that this reconstruction of what happened and of the thinking associated with it is reasonably sound. If there are significant inaccuracies in the report, they are most likely to occur in faulty ordering of the sequence of events. People still remember much of what happened, but they can no longer recall precisely when.

It became clear very early in our investigation that the vigor with which schemes were pursued within the Agency to eliminate Castro personally varied with the intensity of the U.S. Covernment's efforts to overthrow the Castro regime. We can identify five separate phases in Agency assassination planning, although the transitions from one to another are not always sharply defined. Each phase is a reflection of the then prevailing Government attitude toward the Cuben regime.

È.

- a. Prior to August 1960: All of the identifiable schemes prior to about August 1960, with one possible exception, were aimed only at discrediting Castro personally by influencing his behaviour or by altering his appearance.
- b. August 1960 to April 1961: The plots that were hatched in late 1960 and early 1961 were aggressively pursued and were viewed by at least some of the participants as being merely one aspect of the over-all active effort to overthrow the regime that culminated in the Bay of Pigs.
- c. April 1961 to late 1961: A major scheme that was begun in August 1960 was called off after the Bay of Pigs and remained dormant for several months, as did most other Agency operational activity related to Cuba.
- d. Late 1961 to late 1962: That particular scheme was reactivated in early 1962 and was again pushed vigorously in the era of Project MONGOOSS and in the climate of intense administration pressure on CIA to do schething about Castro and his Cuba.
- e. Late 1962 until well into 1963: After the Cuben missile crisis of October 1962 and the collapse of Project MONGOOSE, the aggressive scheme that was begun in August 1960 and revived in April 1962 was finally terminated in early 1963. Two other plots were originated in 1963, but both were impracticable and nothing ever came of them.

We cannot overemphasize the extent to which responsible Agency

Kennedy

officers felt themselves subject to the administration's severe pressures to do something about Castro and his regime. The fruitless and, in retrospect, often unrealistic plotting should be viewed in that light.

Many of those we interviewed stressed two points that are so obvious that recording them here may be superfluous. We believe, though, that they are pertinent to the story. Elimination of the dominant figure in a government, even when loyalties are held to him personally rather than to the government as a body, will not necessarily cause the downfall of the government. This point was stressed with respect to Castro and Cuba in an internal CIA draft paper of October 1961, which was initiated in response to General Haxwell Taylor's desire for a contingency plan. The paper took the position that the demise of Fidel Castro, from whatever cause, would offer little opportunity for the liberation of Cuba from Communist and Soviet Bloc control. The second point, which is more specifically relevant to our investigation, is that bringing about the downfall of a government necessarily requires the removal of its leaders from positions of power, and there is always the risk that the particlpants will resort to assassination. Such remarks from power so the house arment of a Mossaing or the Plants of a Business should not cause one to overlook the killings of a Diemor of a Truffillo by forces encouraged but not controlled by the Usb. Government.

SECRET FIES CHEY

š,

There is a third point, which was not directly made by any of those we interviewed, but which emerges clearly from the interviews and from review of files. The point is that of frequent resort to synecdoche—the mention of a part when the whole is to be understood, or vice versa. Thus, we encounter repeated references to phrases such as "disposing of Castro," which may be read in the narrow, literal sense of assassinating him, when it is intended that it be read in the broader, figurative sense of dislodging the Castro regime.

Reversing the coin, we find people speaking vaguely of "doing something about Castro" when it is clear that what they have specifically in mind is killing him. In a situation wherein those speaking may not have actually meant what they seemed to say or may not have said what they actually beant, they should not be surprised if their oral shorthand is interpreted differently than was intended.

The suggestion was made to us that operations aimed at the assassination of Castro may have been generated in an atmosphere of stress in intelligence publications on the possibility of Castro's denise and on the reordering of the political structure that would follow. We reviewed intelligence publications from 1950 through 1966, including National Intelligence Estimates, Special National Intelligence Estimates, Intelligence Memorandums, and Memorandums for the Director. The NIZ's on "The Situation and Prospects in Cuba" for 1960, 1963, and 1964 have brief paragraphs on likely successor governments if Castro were to depart the scene. We also find similar short references in a SMIZ of March 1960 and in an Intelligence Memorandum of May 1965. In each case the treatment is no more nor less than one would expect to find in comprehensive round-ups such as these. We conclude that there is no reason to believe that the operators were unduly influenced by the content of intelligence publications.

Secret the only

27.

Drew Pearson's column of 7 March 1967 refers to a reported CIA plan in 1963 to assessinate Cuba's Fidel Castro. Pearson also has information, as yet unpublished, to the effect that there was a meeting at the State Department at which assassination of Castro was discussed and that a team actually landed in Cuba with pills to be used in an assassination attempt. There is basis in fact for each of those three reports.

a. A CIA officer passed an assassination weapon to an Agency Cuban asset at a meeting in Paris on 22 November 1963.

The weapon was a ballpoint pen rigged as a hypodemic syringe.

PHO CHI THOSE

The CIA officer suggested that the Cuban asset load the syrings with Black Leaf 40. The evidence indicates that the meeting was under way at the very moment President Kennédy was shot.

- b. There was a meeting of the Special Group (Augmented) in Secretary Rusk's conference room on 10 August 1952 at which Secretary McNamara broached the subject of liquidation of Cuban leaders. The discussion resulted in a Project MCEGOOSE action memorandum prepared by Edward Lansdale. At another Special Group meeting on 31 July 1964 there was discussion of a recently-disseminated Clandestine Services information report on a Cuban exile plot to assassinate Castro. CIA had refused the exile's request for funds and had no involvement in the plot.
- c. CIA twice (first in early 1961 and again in early 1962) supplied lethal pills to U.S. gambling syndicate members working in behalf of CIA on a plot to assassinate Fidel Castro. The 1.361 plot aborted and the pills were recovered. Those furnished in April 1952 were passed by the gambling syndicate representative to a Cuban exile leader in Florida, who in turn had them sent to Cuba about May 1962. In June 1962 the exile leader reported that a team of three men had been dispatched to Cuba to recruft for the operation. If the opportunity presented itself, the team would make an attempt on Castro's life--perhaps using the pills.

SECRET EVES CHLY

This report describes these and other episodes in detail; puts them into perspective; and reveals, that while the events described by Drew Pearson did occur and are subject to being patched together as though one complete story, the implication of a direct, causative relationship among them is unfounded.

CLEAR FIELD OWN

Miscellaneous Schemes Prior to August 1960

March to August 1960

We find evidence of at least three, and perhaps four, achemes that were under consideration well before the May of Pigs, but we can fix the time frame only speculatively. Those who have some knowledge of the episodes guessed at dates ranking from 1959 through 1961. The March-to-August span we have fixed may be too narrow, but it best fits the limited evidence we have.

- a. None of those we interviewed who was first assigned to the Cuba task force after the Bay of Pigs knows of any of these schemes.
- b. J. D. (Jake) Esterline, who was head of the Cuba task force in pre-Bay of Pigs days, is probably the most reliable witness on general timing. He may not have been priv; to the precise details of any of the plans, but he seems at least to have known of all of them. He is no longer able to keep the details of one plan separate from those of another, but each of the facets he recalls fits somewhere into one of the schemes. Hence, we conclude that all of these schemes were under consideration while Esterline had direct responsibility for Cuba operations.
 - c. Esterline himself furnishes the best clue as to the possible time span. He thinks it unlikely that any planning of this sort would have progressed to the point of consideration of means until after U.S. policy concerning Cuba was decided upon about March 1960. By about the end of the third quarter of 1960, the total energies of the task force were concentrated on the main-thrust effort, and there would have been no interest in nor time for pursuing such wills-o'-the-wisp as these.

We are unable to establish even a tentative sequence among the schemes; they may, in fact, have been under consideration simultaneously. We find no evidence that any of these schemes was approved at any level higher than division, if that. We think it most likely that no higher-level approvals were sought, because none of the schemes progressed to the point where approval to launch would have been needed.

Aerosol Attack on Radio Station

Ray Treichler, of TSD, remembers discussion of a scheme to contaminate the air of the radio studio where Castro broadcast his speeches with an aerosol spray of a chemical that produces reactions similar to those of lysergic acid (ISD). Enthing came of the idea. Treichler said he had discouraged the scheme, because the chemical could not be relied upon to be effective. Eenry Bortner, also of TSD,

SECRET LIES GALY

recalls experimentation with psychic energizers but cannot relate it to Castro as a target. We found no one else who remembered enything of this plot, with the possible exception of Jake Esterline who may have it confused with other schemes.

Contaminated Cigars

Jake Esterline claims to have had in his possession in pre-Bay of Pigs days a box of cigars that had been treated with some sort of chemical. In our first interview with him, his recollection was that the chemical was intended to produce temporary personality disorientation. The thought was to sceenov contrive to have Castro smoke one before making a speech and then to make a public spectable of himself. Esterline distinctly recalls having had the cigars in his personal onfo until he last MU/s and that they definitely were intended for Castro. He does not remember how they came into his possession, but he thinks they must have been prepared by Ray Treichler. In a second interview with Esterline, we mentioned that we had learned since first speaking with him of a scheme to cause Castro's beard to fall out. He then said that his cigars might have been associated with that plan. Esterline finally said that, although it was evident that he no longer remembered the intended effect of the cigars, he was positive they were not lethal. The cigars were never used, according to Esterline, because WH/4 could not figure out how to deliver them without danger of blowback on the Agency. He says be destroyed them before leaving WH/4 in June 1961.

Sidney Gottlieb, of TSD, claims to remember distinctly a plot involving cigars. To emphasize the clarity of his memory, he named the officer, then assigned to Wi/CA, who approached him with the scheme. Although there may well have been such a plot, the officer Gottlieb named was then assigned in India and has never worked in VH Division nor had anything to do with Cuta operations. Gottlieb remembers the scheme as being one that was talked about frequently but not widely and as being concerned with killing, not merely with influencing behaviour. As far as Gottlieb knows, this idea never got beyond the talking stage. TSD may have gone ahead and prepared the cigars just in case, but Gottlieb is certain that he did not get the DD/P's (Richard Bissell) personal approval to release them, as would have been done if the operation had gone that far. We are unable to discover whether Esterline and Gottlieb are speaking of a single cigar episode or of two unrelated schemes. We found no one else with firm recollections of lethal cigars being considered prior to August 1960.

Depilatory

Ray Treichler recalls a scheme involving thallium salts, a chemical used by women as a depilatory -- the thought being to destroy Castro's image as "The Beard" by causing the beard to fall out. The chemical may be administered either orally or by absorption through the skin. The right dosege causes depilation; too much produces paralysis. Treichler believes that the idea originated in connection with a trip Castro was to have made outside of Cuba. The idea was to dust thallium powder into Castro's sinces when they were put out at night to be shined. The scheme progressed as far as procuring the chemical and testing it on animals. Treichler's recollection is that Castro did not make the intended trip, and the scheme fell through. Henry Bortner remembers consideration being given to use of thallium salts (perhaps against Castro) and something having to do with boots or shoes. Traichler does not remember with whom he dealt on this plot. We found no one else with firm knowledge of it.

Grand Type Guly

Gampling Syndicate

The first seriously-pursued CIA plan to assassinate Castro had its inception in August 1960. It involved the use of members of the criminal underworld with contacts inside Cuba. The operation had two phases: the first run from August 1960 until late April or early May 1961, when it was called off following the Bay of Pigs; the second ran from April 1962 until February 1963 and was merely a revival of the first phase which had been inactive since about May 1961.

Gembling Syndicate - Phase 1

August 1960

Richard Bissell, Deputy Director for Flans, asked Sheffield Edwards, Director of Security, if Edwards could establish contact with the U.S. gambling syndicate that was active in Cuba. The objective clearly was the assassination of Castro although Edwards claims that there was a studied avoidance of the term in his conversation with Bissell. Bissell recalls that the idea originated with J. C. King, then Chief of WH Division, although King now recalls having had only limited knowledge of such a plan and at a much later date—about mid-1962.

STORE THE SHE

Edwards consulted Robert A. Maker, a private investigator who had done sensitive work for the Agency, to see if Makeu had any underworld contacts. Makeu was once a special agent of the FBI.

He opened a private office in Washington in 1956. The late Robert Cunningham, of the Office of Security (and also a former Special Agent with the FBI), knew Makeu and knew that his business was having a shaky start financially. Cunningham arranged to subsidize Makeu to the extent of $500 per month. Within six months Makeu was doing so well financially that he suggested that the retainer be discontinued. Over the years he has been intimately involved in providing support for some of the Agency's more sensitive operations. He has since moved his personal headquarters to Los Angeles but retains a Washington office. A more detailed account of Makeu's background appears in a separate section of this report.

(Comment: Although we see nothing sinister in it, we are struck by the fact that so many of the persons whose names appear in this account once worked for the FBI. We have already named Cumningham and Maheu. Later to appear are William Harvey, James O'Connell, and Edward Morgan.)

Maheu acknowledged that he had a contact who might furnish access to the criminal underworld, but Maheu was most reluctant to allow himself to be involved in such an assignment. He agreed to participate only after being pressed by Elearis to do so. Maken identified his contact as one Johnny Eoselli, who lived in Los Angeles and had the concession for the ice-making machines on "the strip" in Las Vegas and whom Maken understood to be a member of the syndicate. Maken was known to Roselli as a man who had a number of large business organizations as clients. Edwards and Maken agreed that Maken would approach Boselli as the representative of businessmen with interests in Cube who saw the elimination of Castro as the essential first step to the recovery of their investments. Maken was authorized to tell Boselli that his "clients" were willing to pay $150,000 for Castro's removal.

September 1960

Shef Edwards named as his case officer for the operation

James P. O'Connell (a former Special Agent, of the FBI), then Chief, Operational Support Division, Office of Security. O'Connell and

Maheu met Roselli in New York City on 14 September 1960 where Maheu

made the pitch. Roselli initially was also reluctant to become involved, but finally agreed to introduce Maheu to "Sam Gold" who either had or could arrange contacts with syndicate elements in Cuba who might handle the job. Esselli said he had no interest in being paid for his participation and believed that "Gold" would feel the same way. A memorandum for the record prepared by Sheffield Edwards on 14 May 1962 states: "No monies were ever paid to Roselli and Giancana. Maheu was paid part of his expense money during the periods that he was in Miami." (Giancana is "Gold.")

SECULT EAS CHEA

O'Connell was introduced (in true rane) to Roselli as an employee of Maheu, the explanation being that O'Connell would handle the case for Maheu, because Maheu was too busy to work on it full time himself. No one else in the Office of Security was made witting of the operation at this time. Edwards himself did not meet Roselli until the summer of 1962.

At this point, about the second half of September, Shef Edwards told Bicsell that he had a friend, a private investigator, who had a contact who in turn had other contacts through whom syndicate elements in Cuta could be reached. These syndicate elements in Cuta would be willing to take on such an operation. As of the latter part of September 1960, Edwards, O'Connell, and Bissell were the only ones in the Agency who knew of a plan against Castro involving U.S. gangster elements. Edwards states that Richard Helms was not informed of the plan, because Cuta was being hardled by Bissell at that time.

With Bissell present, Edwards briefed the Director (Allen Dulles) and the DDCI (General Cabell) on the existence of a plan involving members of the syndicate. The discussion was circumspect; Edwards deliberately avoided the use of any "tad vords." The descriptive term used was "an intelligence operation." Edwards is quite sure that the DCI and the DDCI clearly understood the nature of the operation he was discussing. He recalls describing the channel as being "from A to B to C." As he then envisioned it, "A" was Maheu, "B" was Roselli, and "C" was the principal in Cuba. Edwards recalls that Mr. Dulles merely modded, presumably in understanding and approval. Certainly, there was no opposition. Edwards states that, while there was no formal approval as such, he felt that he clearly had tacit approval to use his own judgment. Bissell committed $150,000 for the support of the operation.

Seall eas she

(Comment: In the light of this description of the briefing, it is appropriate to conjecture as to just what the Director did approve. It is safe to conclude, given the men participating and the general subject of the meeting, that there was little likelihood of misunderstanding—even though the details were deliberately blurred and the specific intended result was never stated in unmistakable language. It is also reasonable to conclude that the pointed avoidance of "bad words" emphasized to the participants the extreme sensitivity of the operation.)

During the week of 25 September 1960, O'Connell and Maheu went to Mismi where Roselli introduced only Maheu to "Sam Gold" at a neeting in the Fontainbleau Hotel. "Gold" said he had a man, whom he identified only as "Joe," who would serve as courier to Cuba and make arrangements there. Makeu pointed out "Gold" to O'Connell from a distance, but O'Connell never met either "Gold" or "Joe." He did, however, learn their true identities. An Office of Security memorandum to the DDCI of 24 June 1965 places the time as "several weeks later." O'Connell is now uncertain as to whether it was on this first visit to Miami or on a subsequent one that he and Makeu learned the true identities of the two men. Maheu and O'Connell were staying at separate hotels. Maheu phoned O'Connell one Sunday morning and called his attention to the Parade supplement in one of that norming's Miami newspapers. It carried an article on the Cosa Nostra, with pictures of prominent members. The can Maheu and O'Connell knew as "Sam Gold" appeared as Mon Salvatore (Sam) Giancana, a Chicago-based gangster. "Joe, the courier" (who was never identified to either Maheu or O'Connell in any other way) turned out to be Santos Trafficante, the Cosa Nostra chieftain in Cuba.

At that time the gambling casinos were still operating in Cuba, and Trafficante was making regular trips between Miami and Eavana on syndicate business. (The casinos were closed and gambling was banned effective 7 January 1959. On 13 January 1959, Castro announced that the casinos would be permitted to reopen for tourists and foreigners but that Orbans would be carred. The cabinet on 17 February 1959 authorized reopening the casinos for the tourist trade. Time magazine for 2 March 1959 amnounced that the casinos had been reopened the previous week. The New York Times issue of 30 September 1961 announced that the last of the casinos still running had been closed.) Trafficante was to make the arrangements with one of his contacts inside Cuba on one of his trips to Havama.

Pall and Early Winter 1950

Very early in the operation, well before the first contact with Roselli, the machinery for readying the means of assassination was set in motion. The sequence of events is not clear, but it is apparent that a number of methods were considered. Preparation of some materials went ahead without express approval.

(Comment: It should be noted that TSD maintains a stock of equipment and materials for operational use. When queries are made of TSD technicians about materials or devices that are not stock items, it is not unusual for the technicians to go ahead with the preparation of the materials or devices against the event that there is a formal request for them. Because of this, undue significance should not be attached to advance preparations for this operation. It should also be noted that it was not unusual at the time in question for the Chief of TSD to be by-passed in operations involving his people. While Cornelius Roosevelt, then Chief of TSD, has the clear impression that all requests were levied through him, instances were cited in the course of this inquiry where such was not the case. The practices and procedures in existence at the time may account, at least in part, for the differing recollections of what did and what did not happen and for the differing degrees of significance given developments in the minds of the participants.)

Dr. Edward Gunn, Chief, Operations Division, Office of Medical Services, has a notation that on 16 August 1960 he received a box of Cuban cigars to be treated with a lethal material. He understood them to be Fidel's favorite brand, and he thinks they were given to him by Shef Edwards. Edwards does not recall the incident. Gunn has a notation that he contacted Ray Treichler, of TSD, on 6 September 1960. Treichler remembers experimenting with some cigars and then treating a full box. He cannot now recall whether he was initially given two boxes, experimenting with one and then treating the other; or whether he bought a box for experimentation, after which he treated the box supplied him by Gunn. He does not, in fact, remember Gunn as the supplier of any cigars. He is positive, though, that he did contaminate a full box of fifty cigars with botulinum toxin, a virulent poison that produces a fatal illness some hours after it is injected. Treichler distinctly remembers the flaps-and-seals job he had to do on the box and so each of the wrapped sigars, both to get at the sigars and to erase evidence of tampering. He kept one of the experimental sigars and still has it. He retested it during our inquiry and found that the toxin still retained 944 of its original effectiveness. The sigars were so heavily contaminated that merely putting one in the mouth would do the job; the intended victim would not actually have to smoke it.

for delivery on 7 October 1960. Treichler's notes do not show actual delivery until 13 February 1961. They do not indicate to whom delivery was made. Gumn states that he took the cigars, at some unspecified time, and kept them in his personal safe. He remembers destroying them within a month of Shef Edwards retirement in June 1963.

(Comment: Others recall the cigar scheme, but only as an idea that was considered and then discarded. Roosevelt, Chief of TSD at the time, and O'Connell, the case officer, recall the cigar scheme, but feel that it was never considered seriously. To Gunn and Treichler, who gave it a good deal of time but did not participate in the broader operational discussions, the cigars loom as important.)

Edwards recells approaching Roosevelt after Bissell had already spoken to Roosevelt on the subject; Roosevelt recalls speaking to Edwards after Bissell discussed it with Edwards. Bissell does not recall specific conversations with either of them on the technical aspects of the problem, but he believes that he must have "closed the loop" by talks with both Edwards and Roosevelt. Roosevelt recalls his first meeting with Edwards as being in Edwards' office. Edwards remembers asking to be introduced to a chemist. He is sure that he did not name the target to Roosevelt, but Roosevelt says he knew it was Castro. Roosevelt believes that he would have put Edwards in touch with Henry Bortner, then chief of TSD's Chemical Division, but Bortner has no recollection of such work at that time. Bortner recalls other operations at other times, but not this one. Roosevelt did say that, if he turned it over to Bortner, Bortner could have assigned it to Ray Treichler.

Roosevelt remembers that four possible approaches were considered:

- (1) something highly toxic, such as shellfish poison to be administered with a pin (which Roosevelt said was what was supplied to Cary Powers);
- (2) bacterial material in liquid form; (3) bacterial treatment of a cigarette or cigar; and (4) a handkerchief treated with bacteria.

 The decision, to the best of his recollection, was that bacteria in liquid form was the best means. Bissell recalls the same decision, tying it to a recollection that Castro frequently drank tea, coffee, or bouillon, for which a liquid poison would be particularly well suited.

SCORE FUEL BILL

January - February 1961

Despite the decision that, a poison in liquid form would be most desirable, what was actually prepared and delivered was a solid in the form of small pills about the size of saccharine tablets. Treichler remembers meeting with Edwards and O'Connell in Edwards' office to discuss the requirement. The specifications were that the poison te stable, soluble, safe to handle, undetectable, not immediately acting, and with a firmly predictable end result. Botulin comes nearest to meeting all of those requirements, and it may be put up in either liquid or solid form. Treichler states that the pill form was chosen because of ease and safety of handling.

(Comment: The gangsters may have had some influence on the choice of a means of assassination. O'Connell says that in his very early discussions with the gangsters (or, more precisely, Maheu's discussions with them) consideration was given to possible ways of accomplishing the mission. Apparently the Agency had first thought in terms of a typical, gangland-style killing in which Castro would be gunned down. Giancana was flatly opposed to the use of firearms. He said that no one could be recruited to do the job, because the chance of survival and escape would be negligible. Giancana stated a preference for a lethal pill that could be put into Castro's food or drink. Trafficante ("Joe, the courier") was in touch with a disaffected Cuban official with access to Castro and presumably of a sort that would enable him to surreptitiously poison Castro. The gangsters named their man inside as Juan Orta who was then Office Chief and Director General of the Office of the Prime Minister (Castro).

The gangsters said that Orta had once been in a position to receive kickbacks from the gambling interests, had since lost that source of income, and needed the money.)

When Edwards received the pills he dropped one into a glass of water to test it for solubility and found that it did not even disintegrate, let alone dissolve. Treichler took them back and made up a new batch that met the requirement for solubility. Edwards at that point wanted assurance that the pills were truly lethal. He called on Dr. Gunn to make an independent test of them. Eiwards gave Gunn money to buy guinea pigs as test animals. Gunn has a record of a conversation with Treichler on 6 February 1961. It may have related to the tests, but we cannot be sure. What appears to have happened is that Gunn tested the pills on the guinea pigs and found them ineffective.

Treichler states that tests of botulin on guinee pigs are not valid, because guinea pigs have a high resistance to this particular toxin. Treichler himself tested the pills on monkeys and found they did the job expected of them.

We cannot reconstruct with certainty the sequence of events between readying the pills and putting them into the hands of Roselli. Edwards has the impression that he had a favorable report from Dr. Gunn on the guinea pig test. Gunn probably reported only that the pills were effective, and Edwards assumed the report was based on the results of tests on guines pigs. Dr. Gunn has a clear recollection, without a date, of being present at a meeting in which Roosevelt demonstrated a pencil designed as a concealment device for delivering the pills. Roosevelt also recalls such a meeting, also without a date. Gunns' notes record that his last action on the operation came on 10 February 1961 when he put Gottlieb in touch with Edwards. Gottlieb has no recollection of being involved, an impression that is supported by Bissell who states that Gottlieb's assignments were of a different nature. O'Connell, who eventually received the pills, recalls that he dealt with Treichler. Treichler has no record of delivering pills at this time, but he does not ordinarily keep detailed records of such things.

In any event, C'Connell did receive the pills, and he believes there were six of them. He recalls giving three to Roselli. Presumably the other three were used in testing for solubility and effectiveness.

The dates on which O'Connell received the pills and subsequently passed them to Roselli cannot be established. It would have been sometime after Gunn's notation of 10 February 1961.

Gunn also has a record of being approached about the undertaking by William K. Harvey (former special agent of the FBI) in February in connection with a sensitive project Tarvey was working on for Bissell. According to Gunn's notes, he briefed Harvey on the operation, and Harvey instructed him to discuss techniques, but not targets, with Gottlieb. Gunn's notation on this point is not in accord with the recollections of any of the others involved. We are unable to clarify it; the note may have been in another context. O'Connell states that J. C. King was also briefed at this time, although King denies learning of the operation until much later.

Late February - March 1961

Roselli passed the pills to Trafficante. Roselli reported to O'Connell that the pills had been delivered to Orta in Cuba. Orta is understood to have kept the pills for a couple of weeks before returning them. According to the gangsters, Orta got cold feet.

OFFICE CYTA CHIN

(Comment: Orte lost his position in the Prime Minister's Office on 26 Jennary 1961, while planning for the operation was still going on in Mismi and in Washington. He took refuge in the Venezuelan Embassy on 11 April 1961 and became the responsibility of the Mexican Embassy when Venezuela broke relations with Cuba in November 1961. Castro refused to give him a safe conduct pass until October 1964 when he was allowed to leave for Mexico City. He arrived in Mismi in early February 1965.

(It appears that Edwards and O'Connell did not know at the time of Orta's fall from favor. They have made no reference to it--ascribing Orta's failure to cold feet. It would seem, though, that the gangsters did know that Orta had already lost his access to Castro. They described him as a man who had once had a position that allowed him a rake-off on gambling profits, a position that he had since lost. The only job with which we can associate Orta that might have allowed him a rake-off was the one he held in the Prime Kimister's Office, which he lost on 26 January 1961. It seems likely that, while the Agency thought the gangsters had a man in Cuba with easy access to Castro, what they actually had was a man disgruntled at having lost access.)

The previously-mentioned 24 June 1966 surrary of the operation prepared by the Office of Security states that when Orta asked out of the assignment he ouggested another candidate who made several attempts without success. Neither Edwards nor O'Connell know the identity of Orta's replacement nor any additional details of the reported further attempts.

March - April 1961

Following the collapse of the Orta channel, Roselli told O'Connell that Trafficante knew of a man high up in the Cuban exile movement who might do the job. He identified him as Tony Varona (Dr. Manuel Antonio de VARCHA y Loredo). Varona was the head of the Democratic Revolutionary Front, a group supported by the Agency as part of the larger Cuban operation. O'Connell understood that Varona was dissatisfied with the nature and the extent of this support and that JMMAVE suspected that Varona was not keeping his bargain with the Agency.

(Comment: Reports from the FBI suggest how Trafficante may have known of Varona. On 21 December 1960 the Bureau forwarded to the Agency a memorandum reporting that efforts were being made by U.S. racketeers to finance anti-Castro activities in hopes of securing the gambling, prostitution, and dope monopolies in Cuba in the event Castro was overthrown. A later report of 18 January 1961 associates Varona with those schemes. Varona had hired Edward K. Moss, a Washington public relations counselor, as a fund raiser and public relations advisor. The Bureau report alleged that Moss' mistress was one Julia Cellini, whose brothers represented two of the largest gambling casinos in Cuba. The Cellini brothers were believed to be in touch with Varona through Moss and were reported to have offered Varona large sums of money for his operations against Castro, with the understanding that they would receive privileged treatment in the Cuba of the future. Attempts to verify these reports were unsuccessful.

(There is a record of CIA interest in Noss, but there is no indication that the Agency had any involvement with him in connection with Cuba. He was granted Covert Security Clearances in March 1959 for use by ME Division in his (then) role as consultant to the Indian Embassy and again in November 1962 for use by CA Staff under Project ZRMAJCR, a program for the exploitation of political consultants. In early 1965 Moss became of interest to the House Foreign Affairs Committee because of his record of having represented various foreign governments. A memorandum prepared by CA Staff in March 1965 states that the records do not show any use made of Moss by either NE Division or by CA Staff. The CSA of 7 Movember 1962 specifies that the approval became invalid if Moss were not used within six months of the date of the approval.)

Trafficante approached Varona and told him that he had clients who wanted to do away with Castro and that they would pay big money for the job. Varona is reported to have been very receptive, since it would mean that he would be able to buy his own ships, arms, and communications equipment.

(Comment: By this time Roselli had become certain that O'Connell was an Agency employee, not a subordinate of Maneu. He told O'Connell that he was sure that O'Connell was "a government man - CIA" but that O'Connell should not confirm this to him. Roselli said that as a loyal American he would do whatever he could and would never divulge the operation.)

Roselli was to deliver money to Varona for expenses. O'Connell now recalls the amount as $50,000. Edwards, who was away at the time, recalls it as $25,000. Since Edwards was absent, O'Connell had to get approval from Edwards' deputy, Robert Bannerman, who until them had been unwitting of the operation. O'Connell told Bannerman that the operation was known to and approved by Edwards. Bannerman authorized passing the money and now recalls the amount as being on the order of $20,000 to $25,000. An Office of Security memorandum to the DDCI, dated 24 June 1966, sets the amount as $10,000 in cash and $1,000 worth of communications equipment. Jake Esterline, who signed the vouchers for the funds; recalls the amounts as being those stated in the Office of Security senorandum.

Control of the Contro

(Comment: As a sidelight, Esterline says that, when he learned of the intended use of Varona, steps were taken to cancel the plan. Varona was one of the five key figures in the Revolutionary Front and was heavily involved in support of the approaching Bay of Pigs operation. If steps were in fact taken to end Varona's participation in the syndicate plan, they were ireffective. It is clear that he continued as an integral part of the syndicate scheme.)

When the money was ready, O'Connell took the pills from his safe and delivered them and the money to Roselli. Eoselli gave the pills and the money to Varona, whom Roselli dealt with under pseudonym. Little is known of the delivery channels beyond Varona. Varona was believed to have an asset inside Cuba in a position to slip a pill to Castro. Edwards recalls something about a contact who worked in a restaurant frequented by Castro and who was to receive the pills and put them into Castro's food or drink. Edwards believes that the scheme failed because Castro ceased to visit that particular restaurant.

April - May 1961

Soon after the Bay of Pigs, Ziwaris sent word to Roselli through O'Connell that the operation was off-even if something happened there would be no payoff. Edwards is sure there was a complete standdown after that; the operation was dead and remained so until April 1962. He clearly relates the origins of the operation to the upcoming Bay of Pigs invasion, and its termination to the Eay of Pigs failure. O'Connell agrees that the operation was called off after the Bay of Pigs but that the termination was not firm and final. He believes that there was something going on between April 1961 and April 1962, but he cannot now recall what. He agrees with Bill Harvey that when the operation was revived in April 1962, Harvey took over a "going operation."

(Comment: As distinguished from Edwards and O'Connell, both Bissell and Esterline place the termination date of the assassination operation as being about six months before the Bay of Pigs. Esterline gives as his reason for so believing the fact that the decision had been made to go ahead with a massive, major operation instead of an individually-tergeted one such as this. Whatever the intention in this respect, if the decision to terminate was actually made, the decision was not communicated effectively. It is clear that this plan to assassinate Castro continued in train until sometime after the Bay of Pigs.)

O'Connell believes that he must have recovered the pills, but he has no specific recollection of having done so. He thinks that instead of returning them to TSD he probably would have destroyed them, most likely by flushing then down a toilet. Treichler has no record of the pills having been returned to him, but he says he is quite sure that they were.

In a memorandum of 14 May 1962 Sheffield Edwards stated that knowledge of this particular operation was limited to six persons. In the course of this investigation, we have identified the following persons who knew in late 1960 or early 1961 of this specific plan to assassinate Castro:

- . 1. Allen Dulles, Director of Central Intelligence
 - 2. General C. P. Cabell, Deputy Director of Central Intelligence
 - 3. Richard Rissell, Deputy Director for Plans
 - 4. Sheffield Edwards, Director of Security
 - 5. James Q'Connell, Office of Security, the case officer
 - 6. J. D. Esterline, Chief, WH/4
 - Cornelius Roosevelt, Chief, TSD
 - 8. Ray Treichler, Chemical Division, TSD

- 10. William Harvey, Chief, FI/D
- 11. Sidney Gottlieo, Special Assistant to the DD/P (Gottlieo's name was encountered repeatedly in this inquiry, but he denies knowing of the operation in 1960-61.)
- 12. Robert Pannerman, Deputy Director of Sacurity
- J. C. King, Chief, WH Division (He too denies knowing of the operation at the time.)

The following persons outside the government are known to be witting of the operation and either know or strongly suspect the Agency's connection with it:

- 1. Robert Maheu, a private investigator
- John Roselli, the Agency's principal contact with the gambling syndicate
- 3. Sam Giancana, an important figure in the syndicate
- 4. Santos Trafficante, the courier and man inside Cuba

These additional people were aware of the operation, but their knowledge of CIA's connection with it can only be speculated:

- 1. Juan Orta, the man originally selected to poison Castro
- 2. Antonio Varona, a Cucan exile leader
- 3. The son-in-law of Varona, who is known to have been involved with him closely during this time. (The Varona 201 file makes no reference to Varona having a son-in-law, but he identified this close associate as such.)

The Agency's General Counsel, Lawrence Houston, and Attorney General Robert Kennedy learned the full details of the operation in May 1962. We do not know the particulars of the report Drew Pearson now has, but it may include many of the details of this operation. If it does, then the circle of those now knowledgeable would be widened to include:

- 1. Edvard P. Morgan, Maheu's Washington attorney
- Columnist Drew Pearson and probably his partner, Jack Anderson

Gambling Syndicate - Prase 2

William Harvey, Chief of FI/D, was briefed in February 1961 (by authority of Richard Bissell) on phase one of the grabling syndicate operation. That briefing was in connection with a sensitive operation that Bissell had assigned to Earvey. Earvey describes it thus: Early in the Kennedy administration, Bissell called him in to discuss what Harvey refers to as an Executive Action Capability; i.e., a general stand-by capability to carry out assassimations when required. Harvey's notes quote Bissell as saying, "The White House has twice urged me to create such a capability." Rissell recalls discussing the question of developing a general capability with Harvey. He mentioned the Edwards/gambling syndicate operation against Castro in that context, but he now thinks that the operation was over by then and that reference to it was in terms of a past operation as a case in point. It was on this basis that Harvey arranged to be briefed by Edwards. Harvey's fixing of the date as February was only after review of events both preceding the briefing and following it. He says now that it might have been fearly as late January or as late as March 1961.

After some discussion of the problems involved in developing an Executive Action Capability, Bissell placed Harvey in charge of the effort. Harvey says that Bissell had already discussed certain aspects of the problem with Armold Silver and with Sidney Gottlieb. Since Silver was already cut in, Harvey used his in developing the Executive Action Capability, although never with respect to Castro. We did not question Gottlieb on his knowledge of the program for creating an Executive Action Capability, but Harvey's mention of him in this connection may explain a notation by Dr. Gunn that Harvey instructed Gunn to discuss techniques with Gottlieb without associating the discussion with the Castro operation.

- 37 -

Stoner Fred Gara

Harvey states that after the decision was made to go ahead with the creating of an Executive Action Capability, and while he was still discussing its development with Bissell, he briefed Mr. Helms fully on the general concept but without mention of the then ongoing plan to assassinate Castro.

The Executive Action program came to be known as ZRRIFIE. Its principal asset was an agent, GUJIN, who had been recruited earlier by Arnold Silver for use in a special operation in the Congo (the economical of Publice Liberty) to be run by Justin O'Donnell.

(O'Donnell made a survey of the scene, decided he wanted no part in an assassination attempt, and asked to be released—which Bissell granted.) The project name, ZRRIFIE, first appears in the files in May 1951, although the first recorded approval is dated 19 February 1962. The new DD/P (Helms) on that date authorized Harvey, by memorandum, to handle the project on a special basis. Accounting for expenditures was to be by general category and on Harvey's certification. The initial approval was for $14,700, consisting of $7,200 for QUAIN's annual salary and $7,500 for operational expenses.

Project ZRRIFIE was covered as an FI/D operation (ostensibly to develop a capability for entering safes and for kidnapping couriers). It continued on a course separate from the Edwards/gambling syndicate operation against Castro until 15 November 1961. Envey has a note that on that date he discussed with Bissell the application of the ZRRIFIE program to Cuba. Envey says that Bissell instructed him to take over Edwards' contact with the criminal syndicate and thereafter to run the operation against Castro. Harvey adds that, as a completely unrelated development, shortly after this discussion with Bissell he was told by Helms that he was to be placed in charge of the Agency's Cuba task force.

Iate 1961 - Early 1962

Harvey recalls that he was very busy with a number of things in the period that followed the discussion with Bissell that led to his taking over Edwards' Castro operation. He was turning over his responsibilities in FI/D. He was working with NSA on the Martin/ Mitchell defection case. He was reading in on Cuba operations and was engaged in daily meetings concerning them. He attended a station thiefs' conference in Panama in late January and early February.

February - March 1962

Harvey recalls a first meeting with Edwards in February 1962 on the subject of the Castro operation. He also recalls working out the details of the takeover during March.

(Comment: After Earwey took over the Castro operation he ran it as one aspect of ZRRIFIZ; however, he personally handled the Castro operation and did not use any of the assets being developed in ZRRIFIZ. He says that he scon came to think of the Castro operation and ZRRIFIZ as being synonymous. The over-all Executive Action program came to be treated in his mind as being synonymous with QJWIN, the agent working on the over-all program. He says that when he wrote of ZRRIFIZ/QJWIN the reference was to Executive Action Capability; when he used the cryptonym ZRRIFIZ alone, he was referring to Castro. He said that his correspondence would disclose this distinction. We reviewed the correspondence and found it for the most part unrevealing.

The records (CLLA-1974, 24 April 1954) show that QUAIN was terminated by the Eurembourg Station on 21 April 1964. There is no indication in the rile that the Executive Action Capability of ZRZITIZ/QUAIN was ever used.)

April 1962

Edwards recalls Harvey contacting him in April and asking to be put in touch with Roselli. Edwards says that he verified Helms' approval and then made the arrangements. Harvey states that he briefed Helms before his first meeting with Roselli, explaining its purpose, and that he also reported to Helms the results of his meeting with Roselli. Harvey states that thereafter he regularly briefed Helms on the status of the Castro operation.

(Comment: Edwards statement that he "verified Helms' approval" is the earliest indication we have that Mr. Helms had been made witting of the gambling syndicate operation against Castro. Harvey added that, when he briefed Helms on Roselli, he obtained Helms' approval not to brief the Director.)

Edwards, Harvey, and O'Cornell have differing recollections of the specifics of the turnover from Edwards/O'Connell to Harvey. Not _ ht .

Stolet fied City

all of the differences can be resolved--not even by follow-up interviews in which the information furnished by each was checked with each of the other two. There is no disagreement on the fact of the turnover nor on when it took place. The recollections vary decidedly, though, on the status of the operation at the time of its transfer to Earwey and on just how clean the break was between phase one under Edwards and phase two under Harvey.

- a. Edwards believes that the operation was called off completely after the May of Pigs and that there was no further operational activity in connection with it until Harvey met Roselli and reactivated the operation in April 1952. O'Connell introduced Harvey to Roselli, and Edwards had nothing further to do with the operation—with the exception of a meeting with Attorney General Robert Kennedy in connection with the Phyllis McGuire wiretapping incident. (The wiretapping incident is described in a separate section of this report.) Edwards records show that on 14 May 1962 Harvey called Edwards and indicated that he was dropping any plans for the use of Roselli for the future.
- b. Earway's recollection of the turnover tends to support

 Edwards' summary, but he claims that he took over "a going operation." Some support for this claim is found in his description

the state of the s

of just how it was planned to get the poison into Castro's food by employing someone with access to a restaurant frequented by Castro? The mechanics were identical with those described by Edwards and as reported in our earlier account of phase one of the operation.

c. O'Connell's account of his own role in the operation in the early weeks following Harvey's supposed takeover mikes it evident that there was not a clean break between the Office of Security's responsibility and that of Harvey. Further, O'Connell now believes that there must have been "something going on" between April 1961 (after the Bay of Pigs) and April 1962, but he claims to be unable to remember any of the particulars.

There are other disagreements among the three on facts. They are reviewed here, not because they alter the essential fact of the turnover or of Harvey's sole responsibility for the operation after a certain point in time, but because they suggest that persons who were supposedly unwitting of events after the turnover were in fact witting, because they were not effectively cut off at the instant of turnover.

Harvey's notes show that he and O'Connell went to New York City to meet Roselli on the 8th and 9th of April 1952. O'Connell recalls it as being early in April and that the introduction was made on a Sunday, which would make it the 8th. Harvey says that only he and O'Connell met with Roselli; O'Connell says that Maheu was also present at the meeting. Both are positive of the accuracy of their recollections, and each gives reasons for his confidence in his clarity of recall. The significance, for purposes of this inquiry, is whether Maheu did or did not know that the operation continued under Earvey.

- a. Harvey is certain that he would have remembered it if Maheu were present. He and Maheu were in the same FHI training class at Quantico in 1940. He does not remember having seen. Maheu since he, Harvey, came with the Agency in 1947, although he acknowledges that he may have seen him once or twice socially. He is sure he has not seen Maheu since 1952 when Harvey was assigned to Berlin.
- b. O'Connell, who set up the meeting, is just as positive that Maheu was there. Fe describes a series of events that reassure him of the accuracy of his memory. The four of them traveled separately to New York. They met at the Savoy Plaza Hotel (Savoy Hilton?) where all four stayed. After discussions, Maheu suggested dinner at the Elk Room, a fashionable restaurant in a nearby hotel. O'Connell says that Maheu picked up the tab. They finished dinner about 9:30 or 10:00 p.m. Roselli wanted to all of the bers were closed. They walked around the neighborhood locking for an open bar and finally wound up at the Copecabena. They were refused admittance to the bar because of a rule restricting admission to couples, so they sat at a table where they could watch the floor show. Roselli found himself facing a table at "ringside" at which Phyllis McGuire was sitting with Dorothy Kilgallen and Liberace for the opening night of singer Rosemary Clooney. To avoid Phyllis McGuire's seeing him, Roselli got his companions to change their seating arrangement so that his back was turned to Miss McGuire. Makeu was an integral part of all this. (Roselli's reason for not wanting Phyllis McGuire to see him with his companions will become evident from her role in the wiretapping incident, which is described in a separate section of this report.)

The two differing recollections cannot be reconciled. As a point of interest, Edwards stated that when he briefed Harvey on the operation he deliberately omitted reference to Maheu in order to screen Maheu off from Earvey's takeover of the operation.

The next significant point of difference has to do with what happened after the New York meeting. O'Connell told us that he and Roselli left New York for Mismi the next day (presumably 10 April) and remained there until Harvey arrived. Earvey, on the other hand, recalls a meeting with WConnell and Roselli in Washington on 14 April. O'Connell, at first, did not recall the Washington reeting, but, when given Harvey's chronology, he said he did recall returning to Washington to meet Earvey for some purpose but that the details are vague in his mind. Harvey at first thought that the 14 April meeting in Washington was O'Connell's last contact with Roselli during this secord phase of the gambling syndicate operation. O'Connell told us that Roselli was apprehensive over the new arrangement (and of Harvey personally) and asked O'Connell to remain on for a time, which O'Connell agreed to do. When told that O'Connell was sure that he had continued on in the operation for some two or three weeks after Harvey's takeover, Harvey agreed that this was correct. O'Connell's carryover was for purposes of continuity. We cannot be sure of the date O'Connell was finally eliminated from the operation. He was in Mismi with Roselli and Harvey perhaps as late as 27 April. His role in the operation had definitely ended by June 1962 when he was assigned PCS to Odinawa.

Steret files cher

Harvey recalls leaving Washington for Miemi by automobile on 19 April. He thought that he took delivery of the pills from Dr. Gunn before leaving. Gunn has no record of any such deliveryat that time; his last record concerning pills is dated February 1961. Ray Treichler does have a notation of delivering four pills (one capsule and three tablets) to "J.C." on 18 April 1962. Treichler reads this as being Jim O'Connell. When told of this, Harvey agreed that it was probably correct. O'Connell also feels that he must have been in Washington for the pill delivery.

Harvey says that he arrived in Mismi on 21 April 1962 and found Roselli already in touch with Tony Varona, the Cuban exile leader who bad participated in phase one. It is at this point that the final difference in recollections occurs. Harvey described the manner in which the lethal material was to be introduced into Castro's food, involving an asset of Varona's who had access to someone in a restaurant frequented by Castro. We told Harvey that Edwards had described precisely the same plan. When we asked Harvey how Edwards could have known of the mechanics if there had been no activity in the operation for a year, and if Harvey was starting again from scratch, Harvey replied that he took over a going operation—one that was already "in train." Edwards denies that this is so. O'Connell says that Harvey is the one who is right. The operation was going on when Harvey took it over, although O'Connell does not remember when Varona was reactivated or what had been done with him in the meantime.

Along with the change in Agency leadership of the operation, which saw Harvey replacing Edwards/O'Connell, there also were changes in the original cast of hooding players. Harvey specified that Giancana was not to be brought in on the restriction of the operation, and he believes that Roselli honored the request. Roselli once reported to Harvey that Giancana had esked if anything was going on, and when Roselli said that nothing was happening, Giancana said, "Too bad." Additionally, Santos Trafficante ("Joe, the courier" from the earlier phase) was no longer involved. With the closing of the last casino in Havana in September 1961, Trafficante presumably no longer had access. Roselli now had a man known to Harvey as Maceo, who also used the rames Garcia-Gomez and Godoy.

(Comment: Harvey is unable further to identify Maceo; be describes him as "a Cuban who spoke Italian." One of Varona's associates in the Cuban exile community was named Antonio MACZO Mackle, but it seems unlikely that he was the Maceo of this operation. He was prominent enough in the exile community to have been known to Harvey. Further, it seems clear that Maceo was "Roselli's man." This second phase appears to lack the overwhelming, high-level gangster flavor that characterized the first phase. Roselli remained as a prominent figure in the operation, but working directly with the Cuban exile community and directly on behalf of CTA. Roselli was essential to the second phase as a contact with Varona, who presumably still believed he was being supported by U.S. businessmen with first isl stakes in Cuba. Roselli needed Giancena and Trafficante in the first phase as a means of establishing contacts inside Cuba.

He did not need them in the second phase, because he had Varona.

However, it would be naive to assume that Roselli did not take the precaution of informing higher-ups in the syndicate that he was working in a territory considered to be the private domain of scheone else in the syndicate.)

When the pills were given to Varona through Roselli, Varona requested arms and equipment needed for the support of his end of the operation. Roselli passed the request to Earrey. Harvey, with the help of Ted Shackley, the chief of the JMANZ Station, procured explosives, detonators, twenty .30 caliber rifles, twenty .45 caliber hand gums, two radios, and one boat radar. Harvey says that the "shopping list" included some items that could be obtained only from the U.S. Government. Harvey omitted those items, because Roselli, posing as a representative of private business interests, would not have had access to such equipment. The cost of the arms and equipment, about $5,000, was T/A'd to headquarters.

Harvey and Shackley rented a U-Haul truck under an assumed name, loaded it with the arms and equipment, and parked it in the parking lot of a drive-in restaurant. The keys were then given to Roselli for delivery either to Maceo, to Varona, or to Varona's son-in-law.

- 49 -

Evidently Earway and Roselli had not yet come to trust each other.

Perhaps fuaring a double-cross, each set about independently to assure himself that the equipment reached the proper hands. After parking the truck, Harvey and Shackley kept the parking lot under surveillance until the pass was completed. Roselli, accompanied by O'Connell, did the same. Meither pair knew that the other was watching. Eventually the truck was picked up and driven away. It was returned later, empty, and with the keys under the seat as prearranged. Harvey returned it to the rental agency. Harvey says that Shackley never knew to whom delivery was made nor for what purpose. Shackley was merely called upon to furnish support for a beadquarters operation from which he was otherwise excluded.

May 1962

Harvey and Roselli arranged a system of telephone communication by which Harvey was kept posted on any developments. Harvey, using a pay phone, could call Roselli at the Friars Club in Los Angeles at 1500 hours, Los Angeles time. Roselli could phone Harvey at Harvey's home in the evening. Roselli reported that the pills were in Cuba and at the restaurant reportedly used regularly by Castro.

CLUST THE ONLY

June 1952

Reselli reported to Earvey on 21 June that Varcan had dispatched. a team of three men to Cuba. Just what they were supposed to do is pretty vague. Earvey said that they appeared to have no specific plan for killing Castro. They were to recruit others who might be used in such a scheme. If an opportunity to kill Castro presented itself, they or the persons they recruited were to make the attempt—perhaps using the pills. Harvey never learned their names or anything else about them. From the sequence of the reports, it would seem that the pills were sent in shead of the three-man team, but this is not now ascertainable.

September 1962

Harvey saw Roselli in Mismi on 7 and on 11 September. Varona was reported as then ready to send in another team of three men. They were supposedly militia men whose assignment was to penetrate Castro's body guard. During this period the "medicine" was reported as still in place and the three men of the first team safe.

September 1962 - January 1963

Although Harvey received several reports that the militim men were poised to take off, presumably from somewhere in the Florida keys,

CERRET FLO CHLY

they did not actually leave. First, "conditions incide" were given as the reason for delay; then the October missile crisis threw plans away. Harvey was in Miami between 22 December and 6 January. He saw both Roselli and Maceo several times during that period. He made a payment of $2,700 to Roselli for passing to Varona for the expenses of the three militia men. Harvey and Roselli had telephone discussions of the operation between 11 and 16 January. Harvey says that Roselli wasn't kidding himself. He agreed with Harvey that nothing was happening and that there was not much chance that anything would happen in the future. As far as Harvey knows, the three militia men never did leave for Cuta. He knows nothing of what may have happened to the three reported to have been sent to Cuba.

February 1963

Harvey was in Miami 11-14 February. He had no contacts with any of the principals, but he left word for Maceo that there was nothing new and that it now looked as if it were all over. (Just how Harvey left this word for Maceo is not clear.)

Harvey left Mismi on 15 February to meet with Roselli in Los Angeles. They agreed at the Los Angeles meeting that the operation would be closed off, but that it would be unwise to attempt a precipitate break between Roselli and Varona. Roselli agreed that he would continue to see Varona, gradually reducing the frequency of contact until there was none.

SECRET FRES CHILI

April - May 1953

Earway mays that he received two telephone calls from Roselli during this period. Harvey decided that it would be best to have one last meeting with Roselli before he left for his assignment in Rome. He states that he reported this decision to Mr. Helms who gave his approval.

June 1963

Roselli came to Washington to neet with Harvey sometime about the middle of June. Harvey met him at Dulles airport. Harvey remembers having suggested to Roselli that he bring only carry-on luggage so there would be no delay at the airport swaiting baggage. Harvey had by then closed his own home in preparation for leaving the country and was living in the house of a neighbor who was out of town. Roselli stayed with Harvey as a houseguest in the neighbor's home. That evening Roselli, Harvey, and Mrs. Earvey went out for dinner. While dining, Harvey received a phone call from Sam Papich who wanted to know if Harvey knew the identity of his dinner guest. Harvey said that he did.

SECULT EARS CHIA

STORE THE OWN

It subsequently developed that the FEI had Roselli under intensive surveillance at the time, and Harvey speculates that he was picked up as he left the airport parking lot and was identified through his auto license number. Harvey met Papich for breakfast the next morning and explained that he was terminating an operational association with Roselli. Papich reminded Earwey of the FBI rule requiring FBI personnel to report any known contacts between former FBI employees and criminal elements. Papich said that he would have to report to J. Edgar Hoover that Harvey had been seen with Roselli. Earvey said he understood Papich's situation and did not object to such a report being rade. Harvey said that he asked Papich to inform him in advance if it appeared that Ecover might call Mr. McCone--Harvey's point being that he felt that McCone should be briefed before receiving a call from Hoover. Papich agreed to do so. Harvey said that he then told Mr. Helms of the incident and that Helms agreed that there was no need to brief McCone unless a call from Hoover was to be expected.

This was Harvey's last face-to-face meeting with Roselli, although he has heard from him since then. The later links between Harvey and Roselli are described in a separate section of this report.

The list of persons witting of the second phase of the operation differs from those who knew of the first phase. Those we have identified are:

Giancana was supposedly out out of the second phase, but we cannot be sure that Roselli did not keep him informed. The same may be said of Santos Trafficante. Harvey is sure that Maheu was not involved in Harvey's introduction to Roselli, but O'Connell is equally positive that Maheu participated. The story that Drew Pearson told the President, and which is known in other Government circles, sounds suspiciously like this second phase of the operation. If that is so, then it is likely that the operation has leaked--perhaps through these channels:

We have a more detailed treatment in a separate section of this report of the channels through which the story may have passed.

The Wiretapping Incident

Late 1961 - Early 1962

Well after the Pre-Eay of Pigs phase of the gambling syndicate operation to assassinate Castro, and only indirectly related to it, a development in the private life of Sem Giancana led to an incident that made the FBI aware of the Agency's relationship with the syndicate and required the briefing of the Attorney General on the details of the assassination plan.

Phyllis McGuire, of the singing McGuire sisters, was and is openly known to be Giancana's mistress. Giancana suspected her of baving an affair with Dan Rowan, of the Rowan and Martin caredy team. Both Rowan and Miss McGuire were then entertaining in Las Vegas, and Giancana asked Maheu to put a bug in Rowan's room. Maheu did not want to do the job and declined on the grounds that he wasn't equipped for that sort of work. Giancana made a claim for a return favor: he had worked on the Castro assassination operation for Maheu, and Maheu was indebted to him. Giancana said that if Maheu wouldn't take on the job, he, Giancana, would go to Ias Vegas and do it himself. Maheu agreed to arrange to have the room bugged.

(Comment: The exact date of this is uncertain. An August 1953 item on Giancana in the Chicago Sun-Times refers to the incident, without mention of wiretapping, and sets the year as 1961. There is nothing in Agency files that pinpoints the date, and the memories of those we interviewed who know of the incident are hazy. Edwards and O'Connell did not learn of the incident until after it had happened. Edwards can place it only as being after the Bay of Pigs. O'Connell at first thought that it was in early 1962. When shown the newspaper account, O'Connell said that if the news story was correct, it would have had to have been very late in 1961. An Office of Security memorandum to the DDCI, of 24 June 1966, states that it was "at the height of the project negotiations." This is confusing, rather than clarifying, because the operation was supposedly at dead standstill in late 1961 and very early 1962. Clearly the incident occurred before 7 February 1962, because it was on that date that the Director of Security told the FBI that CIA would object to prosecution.

Presumably the FBI's case was already complete by then.)

Maheu arranged to have Giancana's request handled by Edward L. Du Bois, a private investigator in Mismi. Du Bois assigned two men to the job: Arthur J. Balletti and J. W. Farrison.

(Comment: The September 1966 classified telephone directory, for the Greater Mismi Area lists Edward L. Du Bois under "Detective Agencies." There is an advertisement on the page for "Arthur J. Balletti Investigations" which lists as one of his specialties the obtaining of photographic and electronic evidence.)

O'Connell results that, instead of planting a microphone in Rowan's room, the investigator tapped the telephone, which would not have revealed the sort of intimacies that Giancana expected to discover. When Rowan left the room to do a show, Balletti also left his room to see the act, leaving his equipment out in full sight and running. It was found by a maid, and the local sheriff's office was called. Balletti was arrested. Harrison was not picked up. Agency personnel have no further information about Earrison. The FBI identified him only as being "supplied by Maheu."

Balletti first tried to telephone Du Bois for help but could not reach him. He then called Maheu, in the presence of the sheriff's officers. O'Connell says that Maheu was able to fix the matter with local Las Vegas authorities, perhaps with help from Roselli. However, Balletti's call to Maheu caused the case to reach the FBI. The Bureau decided to press for prosecution under the wiretapping statute. When Maheu was approached by the FBI, he referred them to the CIA.

(Comment: Edwards states that he had told Maheu, who had to work closely with the thugs, that if he got into a bind with the FBI, he could tell the Bureau that he was working on an intelligence operation being handled by Edwards. Faheu, according to Edwards, told the Bureau that he had not personally done the wiretapping, but that it grew out of an operation he was working on with Edwards. Maneu presumably did not mention the ultimate objective of the "intelligence operation" involving the gambling syndicate. The Bureau, in a menorandum from J. Edgar Hoover to the DCI, dated 23 March 1962, stated that: "Maheu claimed that he ordered coverage of Rowan in behalf of CIA's efforts to obtain intelligence information in Cuba through the hoodlum element, including Sam Giancana, which had interests there. Maheu said he was put in contact with Giancana in connection with these intelligence activities through John Roselli, a Los Angeles hoodlum. Maheu authorized wiring of Rowan's room and discussed this matter with John Boselli.")

March 1962

The 23 March memorandum from the Bureau takes the form of a letter of confirmation of a 7 February meeting between an unnamed representative of the FRI and Shef Edwards. The memorandum quotes Edwards as having made the following points: Makeu was involved in a sensitive operation with the Agency; the Agency would object to any prosecution that would necessitate use of CIA personnel or information; and introduction of evidence concerning CIA operations would embarrass the Government. This is also essentially as stated to us by Edwards in reviewing the incident during the course of this investigation.

- 60 -

The 23 March memorandum stated that the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice requested that CIA advise specifically if it objected to initiation of criminal prosecution against Balletti, Maheu, and Harrison. On 28 or 29 March, Edwards met with the Bureau liaison officer, Sam Papich, and told him that any prosecution would endanger sensitive sources and methods used in a duly authorized project and would not be in the national interest. Papich accepted Edwards' oral statement as the reply requested and said that he would report to proper authorities in the Bureau. Edwards made a record of the meeting in a memorandum of 4 April 1962.

Edwards informed us during our inquiry that at the time of the bugging incident and the flap that ensued those (Dulles and Bissell) who had given the initial approval of the plan to assassinate Castro through the gambling syndicate were gone. As no one else in authority (including Kr. Helms) had been cut in on the operation, Edwards dealt with Papich without reference to anyone else in the Agency.

April 1962

In early April Papich informed Eiwards that Herbert J. Miller,

- 61 -

2007 727 3111 2007 727 3111

and the control of th

Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice, wanted to discuss the case. Edwards then brought in Lawrence Houston, General Counsel, and asked Houston to call on Miller and tell him that the bugging incident in Las Vegas was related to an intelligence operation and that the Agency did not think it wise at that time to surface its connection with Roselli.

Houston met with Miller on 16 April and told him of the Agency's involvement, without revealing any details of the assassination operation. Houston's memorandum of the meeting, dated 26 April, quotes Miller as saying that he foresaw no major difficulty in stopping prosecution, but that he might mention the problem to the Attorney General. Houston's memorandum notes that Miller raised a question about the possibility of our involvement in this particular case, the Las Vegas wiretap, standing in the way of prosecution of other actions, particularly against Giancans.

Houston's 26 April memorandum states that on 20 April there was a second meeting with Justice—with Miller's first assistant, Mr. Foley. At that meeting Houston told Foley that the Agency's request not to prosecute was limited to this specific bugging incident, was based on security grounds, and that security considerations would not be a bar to prosecution on other matters. As it was possible that the Attorney General might be told about this and might then call the DCI, Houston briefed the DDCI, General Carter, who said he understood the situation and in due time might brief the Director, Mr. HcCone. It is not known whether General Carter did or did not brief Mr. McCone. There is no indication that General Carter was further briefed on the full details of the assassination plot against Castro.

May 1962

The Attorney General obviously was told of CIA's operational involvement with gangster elements, because he requested a briefing on the details. On 7 May 1962 Sheffield Edwards and Lawrence Houston met with Attorney General Robert Kennedy and, as Edwards puts it, "briefed him all the May." Houston says that after the briefing Kennedy "thought about the problem quite seriously." The Attorney General said that he could see the problem and that he could not proceed against those involved in the wiretapping case. He spoke quite firmly, saying in effect, "I trust that if you ever try to do business with organized crime again—with gangsters—you will let the Attorney General know before you do it." Houston quotes Edwards as replying that this was a reasonable request. Edwards says that among the points covered was that of Roselli's motivation. The Attorney General had thought that Roselli was doing the Job (the attempt at assassination of Castro) for money. Edwards corrected that impression; he was not.

- 62a-

CESTER FRED ONLY

Edwards believes that the request was made later and by telephone.

Edwards believes that the request was made later and by telephone.

A memorandum was prepared and was signed by Edwards. Both Edwards and Houston recall having had a hand in writing it. A transmittal buckship from Houston to Kennedy notes that the request was made on li May, which suggests that Edwards is correct in his belief that the request was made by telephone after the 7 May briefing of the Attorney General. The memorandum is dated 14 May 1962. It was typed in two copies only, with the original being sent to Attorney General Kennedy and the other copy being retained by the Director of Security. It was typed by Edwards' secretary, Sarch Hall. It does not state the purpose of the operation on which Kennedy was briefed, but it does make it clear that the operation was against Castro and its true purpose may be inferred from the memorandum.

Edwards states that the briefing of the Attorney General and the forwarding of a memorandum of record was carried out without briefing the Director (John McCome), the DDCI (General Carter), or the DD/P (Richard Helms). He felt that, since they had not been privy to the operation when it was under way, they should be protected from involvement in it after the fact. As noted previously, Houston had briefed the DDCI on the fact that there was a matter involving the Department of Justice, but Houston had not given the DDCI the specifics. He feels it would have been normal for him to have briefed the DCI in view of the Attorney General's interest, but he also feels quite he sure that/would have remembered doing it and he does not. He suggested that Edwards' deliberate avoidance of such briefings may have led him also to avoid making any briefings. He recalls no disagreements with Edwards on this point and concludes that he must have accepted Edwards' decision not to brief.

Houston and Edwards briefed Robert Kennedy on a CIA operation embracing gangster elements, which presumably was terminated following the Bay of Pigs flasco. Kennedy stated his view, reportedly quite strongly, that the Attorney General should be told in advance of any future CIA intentions to work with or through U.S. gangster elements. Prom reports of the briefing, it is reasonable to assume that Kennedy believed he had such a commitment from Agency representatives.

In fact, however, at the time of the 7 May 1962 briefing of the Attorney General on "Gambling Syndicate - Phase One," Phase Two under William Harvey was already well under way. Harvey had been introduced to Roselli on 8 April and Varona or his men had received the lethal pills, the arms, and related support equipment in late April. The Attorney General was not told that the gambling syndicate operation had already been reactivated, nor, as far as we know, was he ever told

orphic fill colv

that CIA had a continuing involvement with U.J. cangster elements.

When the Attorney General was briefed on 7 May, Edwards knew that Harvey had been introduced to Roselli. The must also have known that his subordinate, James O'Connell, was in Miami and roughly for what purpose (although Edwards does not now recall this). The gambling syndicate operation had been taken from him, and, in 'retruspect, he probably acted properly in briefing the Attorney General on only that aspect of the operation for which he had been responsible and of which he had direct, personal knowledge.

Earvey states that on 14 May he briefed Mr. Helms on the meeting with the Attorney General, as told to him by Edwards. Earvey, too, advised against briefing Mr. McCome and General Carter and states that Helms concurred in this. On that same date, 14 May, Edwards prepared a memorandum for the record stating that on that day Harvey had told him that any plans for future use of Eoselli were dropped. Edwards' memorandum states that he "cautioned him (Harvey) that I (Edwards) felt that any future projects of this nature should have the tacit approval of the Director of Central Intelligence." Edwards informed us that he has no specific recollection of having told Harvey of Kennedy's warming that the Attorney General should be told in advance of any future CIA use of gangsters.

Although the Attorney General on 7 May 1962 was given a full and frank account of the Azency's relations with Maheu, Rozelli, and Giancars in the Castro operation, including the wiretapping flap, it appears that the FBI was not given anything like the same detail. The Bureau quite properly was not told about the assassination operation, and it seems that it also was not told how the private life of Giancana came to involve the Agency in the Las Vegas wiretapping incident. Edwards states that to have briefed the Bureau on the assassination operation would have put it in an impossible bind, since both Roselli and Giancana were high on the Bureau's "list."

The briefing of Attorney General Kennedy was absolutely restricted to him, and we can only speculate that the confidence was observed.

(Comment: Senator Robert Kennedy's secretary, who was also his secretary when he was Attorney General, phoned the Director's office on 4 March 1967 and asked for a copy of the Edwards' memorandum on the 7 May 1962 meeting with Kennedy when he was Attorney General, at which time he was briefed on the Castro assassination operation. Kennedy knew of the Drew Pearson article of 7 March 1957 and wanted to check his recollection of what he had been told by Edwards and Houston on 7 May 1962. The Attorney General's copy of the memorandum for the record of that briefing is in the archives of the Attorney General's office. Mr. Helms subsequently had lunch with Senator Kennedy. He took copy of the memorandum with him and allowed Kennedy to read it. He did not leave a copy with Kennedy.)

If the information given the Bureau is as limited as the records and our information indicate, then the Bureau has not been informed, as the Attorney General was, that the Agency was first unwitting and then a reluctant accessory after the fact. It would be surprising, though, if the Bureau does not now know the whole story of the Ias Vegas bugging incident. Whether the Bureau may now think that CIA was less than candid about the bugging incident (as distinguished from the sensitive assassination operation) is a question for speculation.

August 1963

What is available to the press is undoubtedly available to the Bureau. In fact, some indication of the extent of the Bureau's knowledge is found in a feature story in the Chicago Sum-Times of 16 August 1963, with a Washington date line, under the banner lead:

"CIA SOUGHT GIANCANA HELP FOR CUBA SPYING"

The article cites "Justice Department sources" as expressing the belief that Giancana never did any spying at all for the CIA. He merely pretended to go along with the CIA:

"in the hope that the Justice Department's drive to put him behind bars might be slowed - or at least affected - by his ruse of co-operation with another government agency."

The story places the period of the relationship from 1959 to:

- 67 -

CEPTE FOR OWN

"some time in 1960, long before the abortive rabel involun at the Bay of Pigs in April, 1961."

The newspaper then gives the following version of the bugging incident:

"An equally bizarre episode months later gave the Justice Department its first clue to Giancana's negotiations with the CIA.

"The figures in this incident were a male nightclub entertainer and Giancana's girl friend, Phyllis McGuire, one of the singing McGuire sisters.

"At the time, in Giancana's opinion, the entertainer was overly attentive to Miss McGuire.

"At Las Vegas, Nev., in 1961, sheriff's police seized a prowler in the entertainer's hotel suite. For hours, the intruder refused to identify himself or say he was rifling the entertainer's rooms.

"Persistent questioning by sheriff's deputies, according to federal authorities, led to an admission by the provler that he was on the payroll of a private detective agency in Florida.

"Florida authorities sought an explanation of the incident from the operator of the detective agency. At first, the operator refused to discuss the matter. Finally, however, he told investigators to get in touch with the CIA.

"The inquiry then shifted from Florida to Washington and revealed Giancara's negotiations with CTA, it was disclosed.

"Government sources reported Thursday that the private investigator's mission in the Las Vegas suite of the entertainer was another riddle of the Giancana caper with the CIA. Neither CIA nor the Florida detective Agency ever has offered an explanation of what the investigator was doing in the Hotel suite, the sources said."

Four days later, on 20 August 1963, the Chicago Daily News reported further on the subject under the following headline:

The story cited an incident in which Giancama literally bumped into an FBI agent who was tailing him. Giancama was reported to have said, "Why don't you fellows leave me alone? I'm one of you!" Giancama is represented in the newspaper account as having been approached by-but not as having made any arrangements with-CIA. The story also mentions the Inc Vegas incident, but in terms of someone, possibly CIA, ransacking a room occupied by one of Giancama's henchmen who had just returned from Cuba.

On 16 August 1963 the DD/P (Helms) sent a memorandum to the DCI (McCone) forwarding a copy of the 14 May 1962 memorandum for the record sent to Attorney General Kennedy following the 7 May 1962 briefing of Kennedy on the gambling syndicate operation - phase one. The coincidence of dates strongly suggests that the Director's interest resulted from the Chicago newspaper story of 16 August.

In his transmittal memorandum to the DCI, Mr. Helms wrote that:

"... I was veguely aware of the existence of such a memorandum the memorandum for the record of the 7 May-1962 briefing of Robert Kennedy since I was informed that it had been written as a result of a briefing given by Colonel Edwards and Lawrence Houston to the Attorney General in May of last year. I assume you are aware of the nature of the operation discussed in the attachment."

This is the earliest date on which we have evidence of Mr. McCone's being aware of any aspect of the scheme to assassinate Castro using members of the gambling syndicate.

Drew Pearson has access to these newspaper stories, and they are available to any number of sources who might wish to collect such information. The rumors of CIA's alliance with gargsters are not new; what is new is that the rumors now connect CIA and the gangsters in a plot to assassinate Castro. It may be assumed that the Attorney General (Clark) knows that the rumors of the relationship, as such, are true because of the records of the FRI on the Ias Vegas wiretapping incident. As of this writing, he does not necessarily know more—subject to what he may have learned as a result of the FRI interview of Edward P. Morgan, Maheu's Washington attorney. A clue as to how much the Attorney General may know is found in his statement that Maheu is the closest thing to a link between CIA and Giancana.

The Long Committee

The Agency's previous interventions on Maheu's behalf are reviewed here, because of the increasingly important role of Maheu in the scenario. The last of these interventions occurred during the period May - June 1966. At that time a Senate Committee headed by Senator Long of Missouri was investigating invasions of privacy and planned to call Maheu to testify. We learned indirectly of the Committee's intention to call him. A man who was employed by Maheu in 1954-55 was informed that he would be called to testify about his activities during that period. He was an employee of AID in 1966. The Internal Security Division of the Department of Justice learned that he was to be called as a witness and informed CIA's General Counsel.

In the 1954-55 time period Maheu was hired by the Greek shipping magnate, Miarchos, to help in a financial tusale Miarchos was having with another Greek shipping figure, Crassis, who had managed to negotiate a pact with King Saud under which Onassis would control 90% of all Saudi Arabian oil shipments. British, American, and German shipping interests opposed Crassis' near monopoly, and the US and UK governments supported Miarchos in his fight to have the agreement cancelled. Maheu is believed to have worked at top levels in both the British and American governments, reportedly neeting at least once with Vice President Mixon. Maheu's operations were financed by Miarchos, but CIA became involved in supporting them by request of the Department of State. Agency communications and pouch facilities were made available to Maheu, and he was given help in developing a black propaganda campaign against Crassis. Miarchos, with Maheu's help, won his exap with Omassis.

A variety of litigation arose from the contest. In one law suit for libel before the New York Supreme Court in early 1956 (Onassis vs. Catapodis), Miarchos was examined by attorneys for Catapodis. When questions were asked about certain affidavits in issue (which had been passed through the CIA pouch system), Miarchos, as a witness, was advised by his attorneys not to testify on the grounds of Government privilege. CIA inevitably became involved. The General Counsel prepared a statement for the U.S. District Attorney in New York (to be retained by the OO/C office there) stating the Agency's interest. As a consequence, CIA was identified as being a party to the Miarchos/Onassis squabble. Although that was in 1956, the Agency's intervention is presumably still a matter of record.

The Long Committee planned to resurrect the old Chassis/Riarchos fight, because it had involved an invasion of privacy. Apparently

- 72 -

GERRET AND ONLY

one of the things Maheu did was to hire someone to run a technical surveillance on Chassis' offices, and this became known. Maheu's more recent involvement in the Las Vegas wiretapping incident also seemed certain to receive extensive attention by the Long Committee.

The Long Committee presumably vould have been interested only in Maheu's connection with the wiretappings that grew out of the Chassis/ Miarchos affair and the gambling syndicate operation against Castro. The Agency decided that it would not be in its interest to allow Maheu to testify on the bugging incidents because of the risk that his testimony could not be confined just to wiretapping. Further, Maheu has been used over the years in a number of sensitive CIA operations. There was a risk that a general inquiry might open up other sensitive issues. A number of meetings were held with Edward P. Morgan, Maheu's Washington attorney, and with a close legal associate of Senator Long, a St. Louis attorney named Morris Shenker. Finally, in direct meetings with Senator Long, our General Counsel was able to have Maheu excused from testifying before the Long Committee.

While negotiations were under way to have Maheu excused from testifying, Maheu became quite alarmed over the risk of adverse publicity, which might jeopardize his business with very important clients. He was especially worried over his Howard Hughes account. He applied pressure on the Agency in a variety of ways-suggesting that publicity might expose his past consitive work for CIA. Meheu's teckground and past associations with CIA are the subject of another section of this report.

James O'Connell states that at one point in the negotiations with the Long Committee Maheu indicated that he might brief his attorney, Edward P. Morgan, fully about his past activities so that Morgan would be able to decide how best to represent him. Whether he did or not, and, if so, what he told him, is not known. We have a discussion of the possible implications of this in a later section of this report.

- a. Maheu may very well have told Morgan the details of the plan to assassinate Castro using members of the gambling syndicate, and
- b. Makeu has now, on three separate occasions, seen CIA intervene in official proceedings--once for Miarchos and twice for Maheu.

Skin Diving Suit

At about the time of the Donovan-Castro negotiations for the release of the Bay of Pigs prisoners a plan was devised to have Donovan present a contaminated skin diving suit to Castro as a gift. Castro was known to be a skin diving enthusiast. We cannot put a precise date on this scheme. Desmond PitzGerald told us of it as if it had originated after he took over the Cuba task force in January 1963. Samuel Balpern said that it tegan under William Marvey and that he, Ealpern, briefed FitzGerald on it. Earwey states positively that he never heard of it.

According to Sidney Gottlieb, this scheme progressed to the point of actually buying a diving suit and readying it for delivery. The technique involved dusting the inside of the suit with a fungus that would produce a disabling and chronic skin disease (Madura foot) and contaminating the breathing apparatus with tubercle bacilli.

Gottlieb does not remember what came of the scheme or what happened to the scuba suit. Sam Halpern, who was in on the scheme, at first said the plan was dropped because it was obviously impracticable. He later recalled that the plan was abandoned because it was overtaken by events: Donovan had already given Castro a skin diving suit on his own initiative. The scheme may have been mentioned to Mike Miskovsky, who worked with Donovan, but FitzGerald has no recollection that it was.

Halpern says that he mentioned the plan to George KcManus, then a special assistant to the DD/P (Helms). McManus later told Halpern that he had mentioned the scheme to Mr. Helms. Files were furnished for review by the Director of Security, the Deputy Director for Support, the General Counsel, the Legislative Counsel, the Chief of WH Division, and by Col. J. C. King, former Chief of WH Division. Biographic files and intelligence publications were furnished by the Director of Central Reference. He was not made witting of the reason for our interest in them, and those who assembled them for him were not told for whom they were intended.

We called back four officers for interviews: Richard Bissell, Sheffield Edwards from retirement, Villian Harvey from sick leave, and Nestor Sanchez from his post in Caracas. Otherwise, our interviews were confined to officers assigned to the headquarters installation. We opened each interview by referring to the Drew Yearson column of 7 March 1967, citing that as the reason for our interest in learning of plots to assassinate Castro. We told those interviewed that we were on a fact-finding mission on tehalf of the Director, and that this was not the usual sort of Inspector General investigation. We asked each to name any others who were likely to have knowledge of such plots. We cautioned each not to discuss the subject of the interview with anyone elte--even others whom we might interview. Booby-trapped Sea Shell

Some time in 1953, date uncertain but probably early in the year, Desmond FitzGerald, then Chief, SAS, originated a scheme for doing away with Castro by means of an explosives-rigged sea shell.

The idea was to take an unusually spectacular sea shell that would be certain to catch Castro's eye, load it with an explosive triggered to blow when the shell was lifted, and submerge it in an area where Castro often went skin diving.

Des bought two books on Caribbean Mollusca. The scheme was soon found to be impracticable. None of the shells that might conceivably be found in the Caribbean area was both spectacular enough to be sure of attracting attention and large enough to hold the needed volume of explosive. The midget submarine that would have had to be used in emplacement of the shell has too short an operating range for such an operation.

FitzGerald states that he, Sam Halpern, and Bruce Cheever had several sessions at which they explored this possibility, but that no one else was ever brought in on the talks. Halpern believes that he had conversations with TSD on feasibility and using a hypothetical case. He does not remember with whom he may have spoken. We are unable to identify any others who knew of the scheme at the time it was being considered.

9 March 1961

Jack Stewart, an officer then assigned to the Mexico City Station, met in Mexico City with Rolando Cubela to sound out Cubela on his views on the Cuban situation. Cubela had been attending the leftist-sponsored Latin American Conference on Mational Sovereignty, Emancipation and Peace held in Mexico City from 5 to 8 March.
Cubela was nonexamittal. The meeting was arranged by Carlos Tepedino (AMWHIP-1), a long-time friend of Cubela. Cubela knew Stewart casually from Havana where Stewart was once assigned and where a similar meeting had once been set up but had fallen through.

(Comment: Rolando CUREIA Secades was the second-ranking leader of the Directorio Revolucionario (DR) 13 de Marso, which was an elite group of leftist student activists founded in 1956 to organize violence to overthrow the Batista regime. Cubela was believed to have been one of the participants in the assassination in 1956 of Lt. Col. Antonio BLANCO Rico, then the head of Batista's military intelligence service. The DR members considered themselves quite apart from the Fidelista 26th of July Movement, despite the fact that they had reluctantly signed a unity pact. In the final days of the revolution the DR took the Presidential Palace, which they refused to surrender to Che Guevara but eventually (and reluctantly) turned over to Fidel Castro. Cubela was a major in the Cuban army, the highest Cuban military rank.

(A CS Information Report with a date of information of March 1959 reported that: "Prior to his appointment to the post of Cuban Military Attache to Spain and his subsequent departure for Madrid on 27 March 1959, Rolando Cubela frankly expressed to Prime Minister Fidel Castro his dissatisfaction over the present situation in Cuba. Cubela . . . privately told intimates that he was so disgusted with Castro that if he, Cubela, did not get cut of the country scon, he would kill Castro Minself."

(Although the March 1961 meeting between Stewart and Cubela in Mexico City was inconslusive, it led to other meetings out of which grew Project AMIASH. Cubela (AMIASH-1) repeatedly insisted that the essential first step in overthrowing the regime was the elimination of Castro himself, which Cubela claimed he was prepared to accomplish. He repeatedly requested that we furnish him the special equipment or material needed to do the job. Those immediately concerned with the running of the operation now recall it as one in which the Agency was interested primarily in keeping Cubela active in the MHAPRON program directed against Cuban military leaders, while resisting his pleas for technical assistance in an assass' mation attempt. The voluminous project files and the information furnished us by Nestor Sanchez, Cubela's case officer, do not wholly support those recollections. The Agency offered both direct and indirect support for Cubela's plottings.)

28 March 1961

An asset of the Miami Station reported that Rolando Cubela and Juan Orta wanted to defect and needed help in escaping. (Juan Orta was the gangsters' "man inside Cuba" with access to Castro in the lethal pill operation we have called Gazbling Syndicate - Phase Ore.) Headquarters expressed interest in exfiltrating Orta and Cubela. The exfiltration attempt was called off as a result of a report that the Cuban police were aware of Cubela's desire to defect and of his departure plans.

(Comment:. This is one of three name-links we found in the AMIASH file between Rolando Cubela and persons involved in the gambling syndicate episodes. The other two links are even more nebulous than this. If Cubela was in fact one of the gangsters' assets inside Cuba, that fact was unknown to either the CIA officers running the gangster episodes or to those handling Cubela.)

14 August 1961

Curlos Tepedino reported that Rolando Cubela was planning to attend the French Hational Student Union Cultural Festival later in the month. Cubela sent a message to Tepedino saying that be wanted to talk with a "friend of Stewart's" in Paris if possible. The message presumably was passed through Cubela's girl friend, an airline stewardess. The Paris Station was given approval to approach Cubela, but there is no indication in the file that he was actually contacted.

15 June 1962

The JMWAVE Station cabled that a station asset (AMCONCERT-1) was told by Lucia ECHEVARRIA Bianci that Cubela had left Cuba for Helsinki on 10 June 1962. He was traveling on a Czech airline, by way of Prague, to Helsinki where he planned to attend the World Youth Festival. Lucia's mother and father had arrived in Miami on 9 June and had been seen off at the airort by Cubela when they left Cuba. Lucia's mother told Lucia that Cubela wanted to defect and to enter the U.S. Cubela said that on his return from Helsinki he would pass through Paris where he hoped to meet his old friend, Carlos Tepedino.

The FBI forwarded to CIA a report of a meeting with an FBI informant in Miami on 11 June. The informant reported that Cubela was attending the Youth Festival in Helsinki in July-August 1962 and wanted to defect. In a detailed transmittal memorandum, the FBI identified its informant as Carlos Tepedino, whom the FBI knew to be a long-time contact of CIA. Tepedino offered his services to the FBI to assist in the defection of Cubela. He told the Bureau of Stewart's meeting with Cubela in Mexico City in March 1961. The Bureau stated in its memorandum to us that it had told Tepedino that his offer would be forwarded to the proper U.S. agency. The Bureau also stated that it was informing its Paris representative to refer Tepedino to CIA if Tepedino should contact the Paris Legal Attache.

The JMANE Station reported the substance of a telephone conversation between Tepedino and a station officer, which was arranged by AMCONCERT-1. Tepedino identified the original source of his information on Cubela's desire to defect as being the Echavarrias, from whom the JMMANE Station had received its report. Tepedino said he had approached the FBI in Mieri because of dissatisfaction with the

13 and 14 July 1962

William Waimwright, from headquarters, met with Tepedino in

New York City on 13 and 14 July 1962. Tepedino agreed to meet

Waimwright in Helsinki, and to travel anywhere else necessary, to aid in an attempt to defect Cubela. Tepedino, who is a successful

Cuban exile jeveller in New York City, refused an offer to pay his full expenses. He did accept reimbursement for airline tickets and hotel expenses. He was not offered a calary or bonus.

30 July - 6 August 1962

Tepedino arrived in Helsinki on 30 July. Wainvright was already there. Cubela was found, and the first of a series of meetings with him was held on 1 August. The original objective of defecting Cubela was quickly changed to one of recruiting him in place. These are excerpts from Wainwright's contact report of the first meeting with Cubela:

He said he was considering not going back to Cuba, but after talking to Tepedino, he felt that if he could do scrething really significant for the creation of a new Cuba, he was he was interested in returning to carry on the fight there.

CEPTET THE OHLY

He said he was not interested in risking his life for any small undertaking, but that if he could be given a really large part to play, he would use himself and several others in Cuba whom he could rely upon.

Ee said he had plans to blow up an oil refinery, as he felt that the continuing existence of a semblance of normal functioning in Cuba depended upon a continuing supply of petroleum, supplies of which, as we know, are at a critical stage today.

He also wanted to plan the execution of Carlos Rodriguez (a top-ranking Castro subordinate) and the Soviet Ambassador, and also to eliminate Fidel, by execution if necessary.

While we were making no committments or plans, we pointed out to Cubela that schemes like he envisioned certainly had their place, but that a lot of coordination, planning, information-collection, etc., were necessary prerequisites to ensure the value and success of such plans.

Cubela stated many times during the course of this and subsequent meetings that he was only interested in involving himself in a plan of significant action, and which was truly designed to achieve rapidly his desire to help Cuba.

7 - 9 August 1962

Because of the security hazard in too frequent meetings in Helsinki, where Cubela was surrounded by his associates in the Cuban delegation, it was agreed that further meetings would be held in Stockholm and in Copenhagen. Cubela agreed to meet with a Spanishspeaking case officer in Paris later in the month. Nothing significant came out of the meetings in Stockholm, 7 - 9 August, except Cubela's revelation that he had told four of his Cuban associates of his meetings in Helsinki with Tepedino.

Wainwright, Tepedino, and Cubela met in Copenhagen for further meetings. Wainwright wrote in his contact report:

"... at one time when we Mainwright always wrote of himself as 'we' were discussing the various aspects of Cubela's future role in Cuba, we used the term 'assassinate.' The use of this term, we later learned from Tepedino and from Cubela himself, was most objectionable to the latter, and he was visibly upset. It was not the act he objected to, but rather merely the choice of the word used to describe it. 'Eliminate was acceptable.'"

(Comment: It is worth noting here that Tepedino, a Cutan jeveller in New York, was present at a series of meetings at which the assassination of Castro was discussed between Cubela and Wainwright, whos Tepedino knew to be a CIA officer.)

14 - 23 August 1962

Cubela, Tepedino, and Wainwright met in Paris and were joined by Earle Williamson, a Spanish-speaking case officer from Madrid.

Cubela was given S/W training and was issued appropriate S/W supplies.

He was taken to the south of France on 20 August for a demolition demonstration. Williamson planned to polygraph Cubela and asked for a polygraph operator to be sent to Paris. Cubela indignantly refused to be polygraphed. Williamson cabled on 17 August:

"Have no intention give Cubela physical elimination mission as requirement but recognize this something he could or might try to carry out on his own initiative."

Headquarters replied by cable on 18 August:

"Strongly concur that no physical elimination missions be given Cuoela."

Cubela attended the Collegiate Games in Porto Alegre, Brazil, as a representative of the Cuban government. Ee was net there by Wainwright and Tepedino. Also participating was Mestor Sanchez, a Spanish-speaking case officer from headquarters, who thereafter acted as case officer for Cubela.

Cubela claimed that he had written two S/w messages. (Only one had been received.) He said he was reluctant to use S/w because he feared the efficiency of the Cuban postal censorship.

Cubela discussed a group of Cuban military officers known to him, and possible ways of approaching them. The problem was, he explained, that although many of them were anti-Communist, they were either loyal to Fidel or were so afraid of him that they were reluctant to discuss any conspiracies for fear they might be provocations. Cubela said that he thought highly of Baron GUIN Diaz (AMINUME-10) who was hiding Miguel DIAZ Isalgue (AMICE-14). Diaz had been sent to Cuba by CIA to recruit Guin in place, and had done so. Cubela said he planned to use Guin but was concerned about Guin's "nervous condition" and the fact that he drank heavily. Cubela was told to assist Guin in Guin's intelligence assignments, but not to help Guin leave Cuba--as Cubela proposed.

Cubela (in Paris) wrote to Tepedino (in Eew York): "I don't intend to see (be interviewed by) your friend again," which you should tell them, "so they don't make the trip. I want to get away from politics completely "

3 October 1963

Nestor Sanchez arrived in Paris for meetings with Cubela. (The record does not reveal why Sanchez went to Paris in the face of Cubela's stated wish not to see him. The letter may have been written during a spell of temporary depression. Station officers were already in contact with Cubela when Sanchez arrived.) Also participating in the meetings were John (Red) Stent and Richard Long. At the time of these meetings it was discovered that the French were unilaterally keeping Cubela under surveillance. CIA informed the French that our contacts with Cubela were for the purpose of defecting him.

of U.S. moral support for any activity Cubela under took in Cuba. Sanchez said that the answer Cubela received might be crucial to CIA's relationship with Cubela. Sanchez recommended that "highest and profound consideration be given as feeling drawn by all who in contact Cubela is that he determined attempt op against Castro with or without U.S. support."

13 October 1963

The Paris Station cabled: "Sanchez ETA LOWD 13 Oct. Pending change after 12 Oct meet Sanchez plans return Hqs after LOWD stop in order discuss details operation before entering final round discussions with AMIASH."

Red Stent cabled the results of a meeting with Cubela and Tepedino. Cubela, in a private conversation with Stent, reiterated his desire to speak with a high-level U.S. Government official. Stent said that basically Cubela wanted assurances that the U.S. Government would support him if his enterprise were successful.

29 October 1963

Desmond FitzGerald, then Chief, SAS, who was going to Paris on other business, arranged to meet with Cubela to give him the assurances

And the same of the same and the same of t he sought. The contact plan for the neeting, a copy of which it in the AMIASH file, has this to say on cover:

FitzGerald will represent self as personal representative of Robert P. Kennedy who traveled Taris for specific purpose meeting Cubela and giving him assurances of full U.S. support if there is change of the present government in Cuba.

According to FitzGerald, he discussed the planned meeting with the DD/P (Helms) who decided it was not necessary to seek approval from Robert Kennedy for FitzGerald to speak in his name.

The meeting was held in Red Stent's house in Paris on 29
October 1963. FitzGerald used he alias James Clark. Hestor Sanchez acted as interpreter. Red Stent was not present during the meeting. Sanchez on 13 November 1963 wrote a memorandum for the record of the meeting. It reads, in part:

PitzGerald informed Cubela that the United States is prepared to render all necessary assistance to any anti-commist Cuban group which succeeds in neutralizing the present Cuban leadership and assumes sufficient control to invite the United States to render the assistance it is prepared to give. It was emphasized that the above support will be forthcowing only after a real coup has been effected and the group involved is in a position to request U.S. (probably under OAS auspices) recognition and support. It was made clear that the U.S. was not prepared to commit itself to supporting an isolated uprising, as such an uprising can be extinguished in a matter of hours if the present government is still in control in Havara. As for the post-coup period, the U.S. does not desire that the political clock be turned back but will support the necessary economic and political reforms which will cenefit the mass of the Cuban people.

(Comment: Those involved now recall the purpose of the meeting as being scrething cuite different from that appearing in written records prepared at about the time of the meeting. FitzGerald recalls that Cubela spoke repeatedly of the need for an assassination weapon. In particular, he wanted a high-powered rifle with telescopic sights or some other weapon that could be used to kill Castro from a distance. PitzGerald wanted no part of such a scheme and told Sancez to tell Cubela that the U.S. simply does not do such things. When he was told this. Cubela said he wanted confirmation from a senior U.S. official, not a member of CIA. PitzGerald says that when he met with Cubela in Paris he told Cubela that the U.S. Government would have no part of an attempt on Castro's life. Sem Halpern, who was not present at FitzGerald's meeting with Cubela but who was thoroughly familiar with all that was going on, has a recollection The state of the s identical with that of FitzGerald.)

Be that as it may, the written record tells a somewhat different : story. In Sencez' memorandum of the recting with Cubela he wrote that:

Nothing of an operational nature was discussed at the FitzGerald meeting. After the neeting Cubela stated that he was satisfied with the policy discussion but now desired to know what technical support we could provide him.

Wainwright met with Tepedino in New York City on 14 November.
Wainwright's contact report reveals Cubela's reaction (as told to Tepedino) to his meeting with FitzGerald.

The visit with Fitzlerald, who acted in the capacity of a representative of high levels of the Government concerned with the Cuban problem satisfied Cubela as far as policy was concerned, but he was not at all happy with the fact that he still was not given the technical assistance for the operational plan as he saw it. Tepedino said that Cubela dwelt constantly on this point. He could not understand why he was denied certain small pieces of equipment which promised a firal solution to the problem, while, on the other hand, the U.S. Government gave much equipment and money to exile groups for their ineffective excursions against Cuban coastal targets. According to Tepedino, Cubela feels strongly on this point, and if he does not get advice and materials from a U.S. Government technician, he will probably become fed-up again, and we vill lose whatever progress we have made to date.

wholly on documents found in the project file. Beginning here is an account of an episode in the Cubela operation on which there is no documentary evidence. Dr. Gunn has a record of nine contacts and their dates; otherwise, this ournary is drawn from the recollections of those involved.

Sanchez says that, while Cubela was anxious to do away with Castro, Cubela was not willing to sacrifice his own life in exchange for Castro's. What Cubela really wanted was a high-powered, silenced rifle with an effective range of hundreds or thousands of yards. Cubela finally said that, as a doctor of medicine (which he was), he was quite sure that we could device some technical means of doing the job that would not automatically cause him to lose his own life in the try.

Samuel Halpern and Mestor Sanchez approached Dr. Gunn for assistance. Although none of the participants specifically so stated, it may be inferred that they were seeking a means of assassination of a sort that Cubela might reasonably have been expected to have devised himself. What they settled upon was Black Leaf 40, a common, easily-obtainable insecticide containing about 40/nicotine sulphate. Nicotine is a deadly poison that may be administered orally, by injection, or by absorption through the skin. It is likely that there also were discussions of means of administering the poison, because Gunn was ready to move when asked.

The plan reached the action stage when Halpern and Sanchez contacted

Gunn again on the morning of 20 November 1953 and told him that the device for administering the poison (a ball; cint pen rigged as a hypodermic syringe) had to be ready in time for Sanchez to catch a plane at noon the next day. Gunn says that he went immediately to the FI/D workshop and spent the rest of the day and most of that night fabricating the device. Those in FI/D who worked with him knew what he was trying to make but not for whom it was intended. Eventually, after seven or eight failures, he succeeded in converting a Paper-Mate pen into a hypodermic syringe that worked. He said that the needle was so fine that the victim would hardly feel it when it was inserted -- he compared it with the scratch from a shirt with too much starch. He delivered the workable device to Sanchez the following morning and retained two of the later prototypes. He states that they are still in his safe. He does not know what happened to the device he gave Sanchez; he does not remember its having been returned to him. He believes he was told that Cubela refused to accept the device. . He says he would not now be able to differentiate the final pen from the earlier prototypes that are in his safe.

22 November 1963

Mestor Sanchez arrived in Paris on the morning of 22 November and met with Cubela late that afternoon. Sanchez states that he showed the pen/syringe to Cubela and explained how it worked. He is not sure, but he believes that Cubela accepted the device but said that he would not take it to Cuba with him. Sanchez distinctly recalls that Cubela didn't think much of the device. Cubela said that, as a doctor, he knew all about Black Leaf 40 and that we surely could come up with something more sophisticated than that. It should be noted that Gunn and Sanchez agree that the syringe was not loaded. Cubela was expected to supply his own poison; we merely suggested Black Leaf 40 as an effective poison for use in the syringe.

Sanchez wrote a contact report of the reeting. It makes no mention of a pen or of poison. The following is a summary of the contact report. Cubela said that he was returning to Cuba fully determined to pursue his plans to initiate a coup against Castro.

Sanchez reiterated the assurances given Cubela by FitzGerald of full U.S. support if a real coup against the Castro regime were successful. Cubela asked for the following items to be included in a cache inside Cuba: 20 hand grenades, two high-powered rifles with telescopic sights, and approximately 20 pounds of C-4 explosive and related equipment. Cubela suggested the best place for the cache was on the finca (farm) managed by his friend, Guin (AMTRUMK/10). Since he was returning to Cuba by way of Prague, he did not want to carry S/W or any other incriminating materials with him. As they were coming

Cut of the meeting, Sanchez and Cubela ware informed that President Kennedy had been assassinated. Cubela was visibly moved over the news. He asked, "Why do such things happen to good people?" The contact report does not state the time nor the duration of the Sanchez-Cubela meeting, but it is likely that at the very moment
President Kennedy was shot a CIA officer was meeting with a Cuban agent in Paris and giving him an assassination device for use against Castro. Sanchez states that he received an OPIM cable from FitzGerald that night or early the next morning telling him that everything was off. We do not find such a cable in the AMIASH file. There is a record in the file that Sanchez was due to arrive back in Washington at 1810 hours, 23 November.

The AMIASH project was probably about as widely known within the Clandestine Services as any other project of a similar nature. However, we can identify only four people who know of the just-described episode involving a hypodermic syringe and Black Leaf 40. Sanchez knew all of the story, Eulpern knew most of it, and Gunn knew much of it. FitzGerald did not mention this aspect of the Cubela operation when he first briefed us on it. When we went back to him later with specific questions, he said he remembered something about Black Leaf 40, but nothing whatever about a device for administering it. Gunn said he had the impression that FitzGerald knew about the operation "but didn't want to know." Tanchez says that FitzGerald knew that he and Halpern were seeing Gunn. Halpern agrees, but adds that FitzGerald did not know the specifics of the fabricating of an assassination device.

Beginning here, the narrative is again drawn from records in the Project ANLASH files.

1 December 1963

FBIS reported that Cubela returned to Cuba from Prague.

19 February 1964

The JMMAVE Station reported by cable that two separate, identical caches would be emplaced in support of Project AMIASH during March. One would be put down in Pinar del Rio on Operation ZOFRO. The other would be taken by the AMIRUMAS to the AMIRUMAS infiltration area. Each cache would contain, among other things, two FAL 7.62 automatic rifles.

6 March 1964

Cable from the JMJAVE Station: "Unless headquarters has overriding reason unknown WAVE for including TALs in cache to be carried by AMIRUNKS, with stress following point in WAVE's decision to eliminate TALs: FALs require 7 by 9 by 50 inch oblong cache container which is difficult to handle in the intermediate craft."

7 March 1964

Headquarters replied that: "Reason for desiring include FALs is that this is the main item requested by AMIASH-1."

13 March 1964

The JMMAVE Station cabled: "Since cannot break down FALs to fit available cache container shorter than 50 inches, will omit FALs from AMMASH cache."

17 - 21 Harch 1964

The AMIASH cache was put down on Operation AMIRINK VIII.

24 April 1964

Headquarters cabled the Paris Station that Carlos Tepedino had been briefed to meet Carlos Jorge ROZRZNO Mariquez, "who has an important message from Cubela."

3 May 1954

The Paris Station reported that the message Robreno had from Cubela was that Cubela wanted.a silencer for the Belgian FAL submachine gun soonest.

5 May 1964

SAS requested TSD to produce FAL silencers on a crash basis. There are several later documents in the file describing TSD's efforts to silence a FAL and to modify its sights for firing under poor lighting conditions. TSD eventually came up with a silencer and modified azmunition that fairly effectively silenced muzzle blast and eliminated sonic boom by reducing muzzle velocity.

9 - 11 June 1964

Operation ZORRO put down an AMIASH cache on the north coast of Pinar del Rio containing, among other things, "two each FAL automatic rifles with five magazines per weapon." No mention is made of silencers. From TSD's reports on development of a silencer, one was not yet ready at the time the cache was prepared.

1 August 1954

The JMWAVE Station reported receipt of an S/W message from

- 97 -

GEORGE EVEN EVEN

Carrier Street

AMIRUK-10 dated 16 July. It stated that the AMIASH cache put down in the AMIRUK infiltration area had been located and that steps were being taken to recover its contents. The message said that it was hoped the cache contained "two high-powered rifles with silencers," because AMIRUK-10 was not yet certain that he could recover the cache put down in Pinar del Rio by Operation ZCRRO.

30 August 1964

Manuel Artime received information through Madrid that a group of dissident members of the Castro regime desired to establish direct contact with Artime. On 7 October 1964, an Artime associate went to France for a meeting with an intermediary from the dissident group. The intermediary was named as Alberto BIANCO Romaniz.

12 November 1964

FAIS report: "A delegation of the University Student Fedration of Cuba arrived in Pregue on 11 November to participate in the meeting of the Executive Council of the International Student Union to be held from 14 to 17 November. The delegation is made up of . . . Waj. Rolando Cubela, who will attend the event as a special guest of the IUS."

13 November 1964

Contact report of a meeting in Mashington with Artime: "Artime agreed to talk to AMIASE-1 if it turns out that he is the contact man for the internal dissident group. Artime thinks that if AMIASH-1 is the chief of the dissident group we can all forget about the operation."

25 November 1964

The Paris Station reported Cubela's arrival in Paris.

4 December 1964

Hestor Sanchez prepared a memorandum request for $6,500 as an extraordinary budget expenditure for the travel of Artime for maintaining contact with the internal dissident group's representatives in Europe during November and December 1964. There is no direct indication in the file that the request was approved, but indirect evidence indicates that it was. Artime did travel to Europe and maintained the contacts.

6 - 7 December 1964

Sanchez met Cubela in Paris. This is a surmary of the details reported by Sanchez: Cubela, although unhappy because he was unable to carry out his plans during the rest year, continued to feel that his solution to the Cuban problem was the only one feasible and that he had to continue trying. Cutela was told that the U.S. Government could not and would not in any way become involved or provide assistance in the task he had planned for himself. Cubela appeared to understand our position and said that if he needed help he would look elsewhere.

10 December 1964

Memorandum prepared by Sanchez and left with Robert Ozen, of the Paris Station, as background on the then current status of the AMIASH operation—excerpts:

"Artime does not know and we do not plan to tell him that we are in direct contact with Cubels, nor does Cubela know and we do not desire he know that we are in direct contact with Artime.

"Cubela was told and fully understands that U.S. Government cannot become involved to any degree in the 'first step' of his plan. If he needs support, the realizes that he will have to get it elsewhere. FII: This is where Artime could fit in nicely in giving any support Cubela would request."

(Comment: Sanchez explained to us that what had happened was that SAS contrived to put Artime and Cubela together in such a way that neither knew that the contact had been engineered by CIA. The thought was that Artime needed a man inside and Cubela wanted a silenced weapon, which CIA was unwilling to furnish to him directly. By putting the two together, Artime might get his man inside and Cubela might get his silenced veapon-from Artime. CIA did not intend to furnish an assassination weapon for Artime to give to Cubela, and did not do so.)

- 100 -

17 December 1964

Headquarters cable to Paris: "When Bob Owen contacts Cubela to debrief him, . . . please confirm statement by Cubela to Sanchez that only money and a few commo items were retrieved by the fishermen. Cubela and AMTRUNK-10 unhappy that fishermen had not recovered more from the cache, but it was not possible for Cubela and AMTRUNK-10 to go to the site of the cache personally. (Cubela had told Sanchez that AMTRUNK-10 had used some "fishermen" to recover the cache and that not all of it was recovered. This was the cache put down in the AMTRUNK infiltration area, which did not include the FAL rifles.)

27 December 1964

Artime and Cubela met for the first time--in Madrid.

30 December 1964

Artime and Cubela met for a second time in Madrid on 30 December.

Artime reported the results in a meeting with Mestor Sanchez in Florida on 3 January 1965. Cubela told Artime that he had requested a silencer for a FAL rifle from the Americans, which they had not been able to provide. Artime agreed to furnish wither a silencer for a FAL or a comparable rifle with silencer. If Artime obtained a silencer for a FAL, Cubela would personally carry it back to Cuba with him. If Artime had to settle for some other type of silenced rifle, he would cache it in Cuba for Cubela.

- 101 -

28 January 1965

Sanchez arrived in Paris for meetings with Cubels.

2 February 1965

Sanchez cabled from Paris: "Cubela and Tepedino returned Paris 31 January. Met 1 February. Cubela states full agreement reached with Artime and he well satisfied with arrangements which he outlined for our information (clong same lines as reported by Artime). Artime providing package in Madrid which Cubela plans carry back in personal luggage."

Sanchez cabled from Paris: "As of November 1964 when Cubela departed Cuba neither he nor AMTRUHK-10 had received any part of the Matanzas cache. AMTRUHK-10 itold him fishermen recovered money and parts of communications gear but that noney was no good since it was in a series out of circulation."

11 February 1:55

Madrid Station cabled: "From Cubela on 10 February: On 10 or 11 February Cubela is to receive one pistol with silencer and one Belgian FAL rifle with silencer from Artime's secretary. Both weapons come from U.S. and now in Madrid." (This is in conflict with the earlier report that Artime would cambe a rifle and silencer if that were all be could find. We are unable to resolve the conflict.)

12 February 1955

The Parama City Station cabled: "Artime reported on final meeting with Cubela: Artime had three packages of special items made up by his technical people and delivered to Cubela in Madrid. Cubela seemed satisfied."

4 Marched 1965

Carlos Tepedino reported receiving a telephone call from a friend in Havana who had seen Cubela back in Havana the previous day.

15 Karch 1965

The Madrid Station cabled that one Rafael GARCIA-BAKCO Dirube had arrived in Madrid from Cuba on 15 March and had been introduced to a station officer. Garcia-Bango claimed to be in contact with a group of Cuban military leaders who were planning to eliminate Castro and take over the government. It quickly became clear that he was referring to Cubela. Garcia-Bango maid that he had always been publicly identified as a close friend of Cubela, whom he last saw in Eavana on 9 March. Garcia-Bango said that he had been the lawyer for the Capri Hotel in Eavana. He was jailed for 75 days in July 1962 for defending Santos Trafficante, a U.S. citizen and ex-manager of the Capri gambling casino who was kicked out of Cuba.

- 103 -

(Comment: This is another ranc-link between Cubela and the gambling syndicate plots reported upon earlier in this report. Trafficante was one of the principals in Shef Edwards' Phase One of the operation. He presumably was not involved in Phase Two under Harvey, but we cannot be sure of that. After all, Trafficante was the man who brought Varona into the operation late in Phase One, and Varona was one of the main players during Phase by Two. The three-man team that was sent in/Varona was reported on 21 June 1962 to be in place in Cuba.)

June 1965

Headquarters decided to terminate all contacts with key members of the Cubela group. It had become increasingly apparent that the circle of Cubans who knew of Cubela's plans and of CIA's association

create the duri

with them was ever-widening. The last straw came in early June 1965. (Note: There is a discrepancy in dates. The memoran um prepared at the time lists dates of 2, 3, and 4 May. From other evidence in the file, it is apparent that the month was June -- not May.) One Victor ESPINOSA Hermandez, a former PM trainee who was terminated as a malcontent on 20 March 1961, contacted an I&NS agent on 2 June 1965 with a story that Espinosa thought affected U.S. security. ILNS heard him out and then sent him to the FBI. The FBI listened to the story on 3 June and then sent him to CIA. A CIA officer interviewed him on 4 June. Espinosa said that in May he had received a letter from a friend in Paris urging him to meet in Paris with a friend of Cubela. Espinusa went to Paris and met with Alberto Blanco, one of Cubela's closest associates in the supposed plan to assassinate Castro. Blanco claimed to have a message from Cubela, which Cubela vanted Espinosa to deliver to CIA. The message was that Cubela and the others with him were in a position to kill Castro and others in the regime, but they needed some help and to know whether the CIA and the U.S. Government were with them and willing to support them. If the answer were affirmative, Cubela would send out details on what he needed. From his story it was obvious that Espinosa knew the full details of the Cubela operation.

(Comment: There is no indication in the file that CIA ever found out the sort of "help" Cubela inought he needed. At a meeting in Paris on 1 February 1955 he asked for $10,000 "to organize the internal group." CLA refused to give him the money and suggested he try to get it from Artime. Cubela was quite upset over the turn down. A few days later, in Madrid, he approached a Cuben asset of the Madrid Station, claiming he was stranded in Madrid with no money. Ecadquarters approved a "personal loan" of $200. On 16 February 1965, Cubela asked Sanchez for $1,000, which headquarters approved giving him.

- 105 -

In a later meeting with Carlos Tepedino in New York City, Tepedino said that he had given Cubela $7,000.)

On 23 June 1965 headquarters sent a cable to the stations concerned directing termination of contact with members of the Cubela group. It read, in part:

insecure and that further contact with key members of group constitutes menace to CIA operations against Cuba as well as to the security of CIA staff personnel in Vestern Europe.

"Under the circumstances headquarters desires that contact with key members of the group be eliminated as rapidly as possible, and that assets who may be in contact with individual members of the group or peripherally involved in AMIASH conspiracy be warned of danger implicit in these associations and directed to eliminate contacts ASAP."

1 March 1965

Reuters reported from Havana that the Cuban security police ... had arrested two military officers for alleged counterrevolutionary activities involving the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency. They were identified as Maj. Rolando Cubela and Maj. Famon Guin.

7 March 1966

FBIS quoting Havana Demestic Service: "The trial of the accused Rolando Cubela, Pamon Guin, and others who are linked to the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, was begin in the revolutionary court of Bavana district in Ia Cebana today at 1500 hours."

8 March 1966

Excerpts from first day's trial proceedings as reported by the Havana Domestic Service and copied by FBIS:

Former Majors Rolando Cubela and Pamon Guin as well as others who are under indictment have confessed their guilt. The defendants are being tried for crimes against the integrity and stability of the nation by having planned the assassination of Maj. Fidel Castro.

The defendants are Rolando Cubela Secades, Ramon Guin Diaz, Jose Luis Gonzalez Gallarreta, Alberto Blanco Romariz, and Juan Alsina Navarro, all of whom confessed their guilt in the imputed facts of the case. Also appearing in the trial were Guilleroo Cunill Alvarez and Angel Herrero Veliz.

The accused Jose Luis Conzales Callarreta, who worked as a diplomatic attache in the Cuban Engassy in Spain, betrayed his country for 100,000 dollars given him by CIA agents whom he contacted only a month after his arrival in Spain. (He) met with an official of the aforementioned organization of international subversion named James Roel who covered his activities by appearing as an official of the U.S. Embassy in Spain. Noel demanded that biographic information and information about the Cuban diplomatic mission be furnished him under this arrangement.

Cubela during his stay in Europe makes three trips to Spain, on 26 December 1904, and on 6 and 20 February 1965. The revolutionary ringleader Artime goes to Madrid at the beginning of February 1965. A meeting is held between Cubela and Artime in which they agree on the final plan.

This plan would begin with a personal attack aimed at Maj. Fidel Castro Ruz. This criminal act would be followed by an armed invasion of the country 48 hours later by U.S. troops. The attack against Courade Fidel Castro would be made using a 7.62 mm. FAL rifle that Cubela owned. This weapon would be fitted with a powerful 4x40 teglescopic sight and a silencer.

Artime sent Callego to the United States to get the telescopic sight and the silencer. Once obtained, this equipment was delivered to Blanco Romariz. He in turn delivered it to Gonzalez Gallarreta who then delivered it to Cubela the day before he left Hadrid.

In order to insure the successof his plans, Cubela meets with defendant Guint. Guin had been recruited since September 1963 as a spy for the Yankee CIA. This recruiting was done by CIA agent Miguel Diaz who infiltrated Cube in order to recruit him, and did so.

Seized in Cubela's residence was a Tasco brand telescopic sight with accessories, the FAL rifle, large quantities of weapons and armunition for them, fragmentation and incendiary grandes, and other military equipment and material.

Carried Lines 1888

The punishment to which the defendants are subject and which this prosecution wishes imposed is as follows: For Rolando Cubela Secades, Roon Guin Diez, Jose Luis Gonzelez Gallarreta, and Alberto Blanco Romariz--the leath penalty by firing squad. For Juan Alsina tavarro, Guillermo Cumill Alvarez, and Angel Rerrero Veliz--30 years imprisonment plus corresponding additional penalties.

9 March 1956

FRIS report from Havana Domestic Service: "Prime Minister Fidel Castro has sent a letter to the prosecutor in the case . . . against Majors Rolando Cubela, Famon Guin, and other defendants. In it, the Prime Minister says that it must be recognized from all this, a bitter but seful lesson may be drawn, adding, 'I suggest that the court not ask the death sentence for any of the accused."

10 March 1966

FBIS report of testimony given in court on 8 March:

Question: Do you recall when the silencer broke?

Cubela: The silencer? Actually, the silencer did not break. The silencer actually did not break.

Question: Where is the silencer?

Cubela: I threw the silencer away because it was burning my hands.

Prosecutor: Have you spoken with Comrade Fidel Castro recently?

Cubela: Yes.

Prosecutor: Can you tell the court when you spoke with Courade Fidel?

- 109 -

Cubels: I believe it was in January, let me see, in January, in January.

Prosecutor: In January: Do you recall the conversation you had with Course Fidel, and did Course Fidel offer to help you?

Cubela: Courade Pidel opened the doors, opened the doors to me. He gave me, he gave me to understand that he knew what I was doing but I did not have enough courage to tell him.

Defense Attorney: Cubela Secades, what, in your view, is the punishment merited by conduct of this nature?

Cubela: The worst!

Question: What do you mean by "the worst?"

Cubels: The wall.

Question: . What do you mean by "the wall?"

Cubela: Deserved execution by a firing squad.

11 Karch 1966

FBIS report quoting Havans Domestic Service of 10 March:

Revolutionary Court No. 1, which has tried case 108 in crimes against the integrity and security of the nation, has pronounced sentences on the accused Rolando Cubela Secades, Ramon Guin Diaz, and others.

According to the sentences, Rolando Cubela and Ramon Guin were sentenced to 25 years imprisonment; Jose Luis Gonzalez Gallarreta and Alberto Blanco Romariz, 20 years; and Juan Hilario Alsina Ravarro, 10 years.

Guillermo Cumil Alvarez and Angel Herrero Veliz were absolved of guilt. They were released provided they are not liable to any other charges.

(Comment: It is worth noting that none of Cubela's dealings with CIA from March 1961 until Howenter 1964 were mentioned in the trial proceedings. The first association of Cubela with CIA was in connection with his trip to Hurope in late 1964 and early 1955 during which he had his meetings with Artime. The trial evidence was confined to Cucela's counterrevolutionary activities growing out of those meetings with Artime in December 1964 and February 1965. None of his many direct contacts with CIA officers, some of whom he knew by true name, were mentioned. There is not even a hint of the ballpoint pen/ hypodermic/Black leaf 40 episode. The Cuban authorities may have gotten that information from him and decided not to . . introduce it in evidence, but we can think of no convincing reason why they would have withheld it. The closest we can come to a decent reason, and it is pure conjecture, is this: Castro may have thought it politically imprudent to allow the execution of someone so close to his inner circle, who had merely plotted without acting. If the full details of Cubela's involvement with CIA had come out in court, Castro might have had little excuse for asking for leniency.)

Discussion of Assacsination at High-Level Covernment Meetings

Drew Pearson claims to have a report that there was a high-level meeting at the Department of State at which plans for the assassimation of Castro were discussed. We find record of two high-level, interagency meetings at which assassimation of Castro was raised. The first (and probably the one to which Pearson refers) was at the Department of State on 10 August 1962. It was a meeting of the Special Group (Augmented). The second meeting we have identified was held on 30 July 1964. It was a meeting of the 303 Committee and probably was held in the White House Situation Room. The two meetings are described separately below.

10 August 1962

The Special Group (Augmented) met at the Department of State, either in Secretary Rusk's office or in his conference room. The following are recorded as being present:

: State

Dean Rusk, Alexis Johnson, Edvin Hartin, Richard Goodwin, Robert Hurwitch

White House

Harvell Taylor, McGeorge Bundy (Bill Harvey's notes record that Robert Kennedy was absent and that Bundy had his proxy.)

Defense

Robert McNamara, Roswell Gilpatric, Lyman Lemnitzer, Edward Lansdale

Thomas Parrott

Tom Parrott's minutes of the meeting make no mention of the subject of assassination. Both McCorm and Harvey recall that McCorm raised the subject. Harvey's notes taken at the meeting show that it was also mentioned by Murrow, but the nature of the comments was not recorded. Mr. McCorm states, in a memorandum of 14 April 1967, that he recalls meetings on 8 or 9 August in the JCS Operations Room in the Pentagon and on 10 August 1962 in Secretary Rusk's conference room. At one of these meetings (and McConm now recalls it as being at the JCS) the suggestion was made that top people in the Cuban regime, including Castro, be liquidated.

(Comment: As it will later be seen, Mr. McCone's recollection is probably faulty. It is quite clear that assassination came up for discussion at the 10 August meeting at State.)

Hr. McCone says that he took immediate exception to the discussion and promptly after the meeting called on Secretary McKemara personally to emphasize his position. According to McCone, McHamara "heartily agreed." McCone states in his memorandum that at no time did the suggestion receive serious consideration by the Special Group (Augmented) or by any individual responsible for policy. McCone aids that through the years the Cuban problem was discussed in terms such as "dispose of Castro," "remove Castro," and "knock off Castro," etc., but that these phrases were always construed to mean the overthrowing of the communist government in Cuba. Harvey recalls that, when McCone told him of the McCone-McKamara conversation, McCone said that if he, McCone, were to be involved in such a thing he would be excemmunicated.

Pollowing the 10 August meeting, and without reference to the reported exchange between McCone and McNemara, Iansdale addressed a memorandum on 13 August to William Harvey (CIA), Robert Hurwitch (State), General Harris (Defense), and Don Wilson (USIA). The memorandum assigned responsibility for drafting papers on various subjects related to the Cuban operation. Harvey's assignment included: "Intelligence, Political (splitting the regime, Fortion excised from the CIA file copy?).

On 14 August, Earvey submitted a memorandum to the DD/P (Helms) reporting the Lansdale communication and what Harvey had done about it. Harvey's memorandum to the ID/P states that the excised portion had consisted of the phrase: "including elimination of leaders". Harvey wrote that he had phoned Lansdale's office and had spoken with Frank Hand in Lansdale's absence. Earvey said he had protested the use of the phrase and had proposed that steps be taken to have it excised from all copies. This was agreed to. Harvey deleted the phrase from his own copy and assumes that instructions were liven to other recipients to do the same. Farvey told us that Iansdale repeatedly tried to raise the matter of assassination of Castro with Harvey over the next several weeks. Harvey says that he always avoided such discussions. Harvey estimates that five persons in Iansdale's office were generally aware of the sensitive details of Project HOWGOOSE and of Iansdale's interest in assassination as an aspect of it.

- 114 -

30 July 1964

The 303 Committee met in regular session, probably in the Situation Room of the White House. (Desmond FitzGerald recalls that such meetings were generally held there.) The following are recorded as being present:

McGeorge Bundy, Cyrus Vance, John McCone, Thomas Hughes
Desmond Fitzlerald for the discussion on Cuba

Col. Ralph Steakley was present for another item on the agency, but it is not shown if he was present when the Cuba item was discussed.

Peter Jessup as secretary

The minutes of the seeting record this in the context of the discussion of Cuba:

- 115

COORT FILE CAR

"It was agreed that Mr. FitzGerald would contact Mr. Sam Papich of the FBI in regard to the earlier report of an alleged plot with Maria overtones to assassinate Castro and which the Attorney General agreed to handle as a matter of law enforcement."

The reference is clearly to a 10 June 1954 memorandum information report from the DD/P to the Director. The following additional "elite" dissemination was made of it:

Special Assistant to the President for Kational Security Affairs
Assistant Secretary, Inter-American Affairs, Department of State
Director of Intelligence and Research, Department of State
Director, Defense Intelligence Agency
The Attorney General
Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation
Deputy Director of Central Intelligence
Deputy Director for Intelligence

The report related a proposal for the assassination of Castro that was made to prominent Cuban exiles. The Mafia appeared to be involved in the scheme. The asking price for doing the job was $150,000, with a guarantee of $10,000 for expenses. A wealthy Cuban exile, Jose Mario "Pepin" Bosch, President of Bacardi Rum International, was reported ready to contribute $50,000. Bosch approached the Chief of Station, JMWAVE, and suggested that the U.S. Government also contribute funds. The suggestion was rejected out of hand. The record indicates that CIA's only involvement in the plot was to report information of its existence. The last record we find of the incident

- 116 ·

erate tive full

is a memorahdum from the DCI (McCone) to Bundy, dated 19 August 1964, reporting the results of FBI interviews with the alleged participants. Obviously, nothing came of the plot.

(Comment: It may be only coincidence, but we are struck by the point that this group of plotters, allegedly including gaugster elements, offered to assassinate Castro for $150,000, which is precisely the sum that CIA offered to pay in an earlier plot that very definitely involved gaugster elements. It could be the same group of gaugsters, or it could be that the criminal underworld knows the "going price.")

As we have 'said earlier, if Drew Pearson has firm information on a high-level meeting at which assassination of Castro was discussed, it is likely that the reference would be to the 10 August 1962 meeting of the Special Group (Augmented). The 30 July 1964 303 Committee Reeting is described only because its reference to assassination of Castro might be distorted to assume some of the characteristics of the Pearson story.

THE DREW PEARSON STORY

Published Details

The CIA hatched a plot to knock off Castro.

Robert Kennedy may have approved an aumassimation plot.

Underworld figures were actually recruited to carry out the plot.

Three hired ancassins were caught in liavana where a lone survivor is still supposed to be languishing in prison.

Castro learned enough at least to believe the CIA was seeking to kill him. He is reported to have cooked up a counterplot against President Kennedy.

Unpublished Details

Pills were sent to Cuba for use in the assassination.

There was a meeting at the Department of State at which the assussination of Castro was discussed.

The Facts As We Know Them

True.

Not true. He was briefed on Cambling Syndicate-Phase One after it was over. He was not briefed on Phase Two.

True.

Roselli informed Harvey on 21 June 1962, presumably on the basis of information from Varona, that a team of three men was inside Cuba. We do not know their identities nor what may have happened to them. We have no proof that they were actually dispatched. None of the aunounced captures and executions during this period fits this team.

This reportedly has come out in the Garrison investigations. It also was stated by Castillo in the Philippines under direct interrogation. We have no independent confirmation of any sort. (Note that Garrison met with Roselli in Las Vegas in March 1967.)

True. At least we were told by Roselli that the pills were sent in during Phase One and again in Phase Two.

True. The subject was raised at a meeting at State on 10 August 1962, but it is unrelated to any actual attempts at assassination. It did result in a MONGOOSE action memorandum by Landale assigning to CIA action for planning liquidation of leaders. The offending phrase was later excised from copies forwarded to CIA, State, Defense, and USIA, but the damage may already have been done.

The Possible Ramifications of the Gambling Symilante Operation

The earlier sections of this report describe all of the CIA schemes aimed at the assassination of Costro that we have been able to discover. The accounts of the two phases of the gembling syndicate operation are factual to the extent that they are based on what those interviewed recall or believe the facts to have been. It is evident that some of those facts have leaked, are being talked about, or are being peddled. On the opposite page is a list of the main retails of the story Drew Pearson has, as they are known to us, together with a brief comment on the apparent accuracy of each. There is support in fact for most of the details in Pearson's story. He has a garbled account of the role played by Robert Kennedy, and he errs in telling the story as if all of the details are part of a single story, which they are not. For the most part, though, his facts are straight and he has the truly important aspects of the gambling syndicate operation.

Until James O'Connell returned on 2 May from his meetings in Las Vegas, we were faced with the difficulty of being unable to estimate the dimensions of the problem facing the Agency unless we could discover what has been leaked, by whom, to whom, and for what purpose. Home of those things could be deduced with confidence from the information then available to us. O'Connell, who has already reported to you orally and will be submitting his written report directly to you, is able to shed some light on the likely sources of Pearson's information. He has also briefed us on his conversations with Maheu. These are the key points:

- a. Maheu did brief his attorney, Edward P. Morgan, on Maheu's participation in Phase One.
- b. Kaheu knew nothing of Phase Two while it was under way and has never heard of it from Roselli.
- c. Morgan and Roselli were acquainted, independently of Maheu, well before Maheu became involved with Roselli in the gambling syndicate operation. Eoselli was steered to Morgan by E. M. Greenspum, editor and publisher of the Iss Yegas Sum.
 - d. Haheu suspects that Roselli is a client of Morgan's.
- e. Roselli is drinking heavily. Morgan has been in Las Vegas once or twice recently, was drinking too much, and was "indiscreet."
- f. Jim Garrison, Edward Morgan, and Roselli were all in Las Vegas at the same time this past March. Garrison was in touch with Roselli; so was Morgan. It is our impression that Greenspun was also involved in the conversations. We do not know the date, but it night be noted that one of Pearson's columns

*It is quite possible that the fact of Robert Kennedy's having been briefed, and perhaps the substance of the briefing, is more widely known to government officials than this list would indicate. We know that Mr. McCone on 16 August 1963 asked for and received a copy of the memorandum record of the briefing. Others in Justice and the FBI besides Kennedy may know of the memorandum and of its contents.

g. According to Maheu, Morgan and Jack Anderson, Drev Pearson's associate, are very close.

This seems clearly to point the finger at Roselli as the ultimate source of the information on the gambling symblecate plot and to confirm Morgan as Pearson's source.

We can test the accuracy of this assumption against analysis we had done earlier in an effort to identify the likely source of Pearson's story. On the opposite page is a listing of persons definitely known 'n be witting of certain key facts now in Pearson's possession. The list includes CIA officers who knew more than one of the key facts, plus all known outsiders. These were our conclusions:

a. If Drew Pearson has a single source, and if Pearson's immediate source is the ultimate source of the leak, and if compartmentation was not violated, then Bill Earwey emerges as the likely candidate. He was the only person we found in the course of this inquiry who knew all four of the key facts at the time the Pearson columns appeared. We preferred not to think that Bill Harvey was the culprit. We could find no persuasive reason why he would wish to leak the story deliberately, and we doubted that he would te so indiscreet as to lesk it accidentally. Further, if he were the source, we could expect Pearson's story to be completely accurate, because Earwey knew the truth.

- 122 -

CLOSET THE SHAPE

Secret Step Chil

- b. If we ruled out Harvey as the source, then it appeared that there must be at least two ultimate sources of leaks. The State Department meeting was not known to any of the other participants in the operation—assuming that Harvey did not mention it to any of them. Therefore, it is quite possible that the leak on the State Department meeting has come from someone who has no direct knowledge of the gambling syndicate operation but does know of the meeting.
- c. From the standpoint of who-knew-what, the next most likely source of the original leak is John Roselli. He is, in fact, the only person with direct and continuous participation throughout both phases of the gambling syndicate operation. He introduced Maheu to Sam Giancana as the first step in getting the operation under way, and he was the one who made the final break with Varona when the operation was abandoned. He knows everything that went on with the gangsters, with Orta, and with Varona between those dates. He and Robert Maheu are the only non-CIA participants with immediate knowledge of the Robert Kennedy aspect. Shef Edwards had lunch with Roselli and Maheu in Los Angeles in the surmer of 1952. Edwards mays that Roselli knew Edwards' true name and his position in the Agency. Edwards said he took the occasion to express his personal appreciation to Roselli, and told Roselli that he, Edwards, had personally told Attorney General Kennedy of what Roselli had tried to do in the national interest. We know that Kennedy was merely briefed on the operation—and only on Phase One at that—but Roselli may have inferred that Kennedy had an active role in the operation.

- d. We did not know what Robert Maheu knew of the operation firsthand, because we had conflicting information on precisely when he was cut off from direct participation. He has direct knowledge of the first phase, but probably little if any of the second phase (from which Fearson's story seems to come). If Maheu knows of the second phase, he could have learned of it only from Roselli.
- e. Maceo, about whom we know very little, was "Roselli's man" in the second phase. He presumably knows of the pills and of the three-man team, but the other details he could have known only from Roselli.
- f. Varona's knowledge and that of his son-in-law would be limited to the pills and the team, but they should know considerably more of the specifics; such as, who received the pills, the composition of the team, and the eventual fate of the team.

g. Giancena and Trafficante were presumably cut out of Phase Two. They could have learned of it only from Roselli.

About all that emerged from this review of "who had direct knowledge of what" was support for the hypothesis that Drew Pearson's story probably is drawn from more than one informant: one on the State Department meeting and another (or others) on the gambling syndicate operation. We also postulated that Roselli is the most likely ultimate source of Pearson's story. This line of reasoning and the information O'Connell got from Maheu are consistent.

Our supposition until now was that the immediate and the ultimate sources, if different people, were leaking or peddling the story with ulterior motives in mind. What those ulterior motives might be were difficult to fathom -- for these reasons:

- a. If protection was what the source was seeking, he could be better assured of getting it by a direct approach to CIA for help.
- b. Maheu was the only known link associating Morgan with the syndicate plot, and Maheu stands only to lose by having his role become common knowledge.
 - c. Trose who know Morgan, Maheu, and Roselli thought it quite out of character for any of the three to be spreading the story deliberately for a private purpose.

Sittled - Early Gray

In learning of the Roselli-Morgan link, we are relieved of the need for speculation as to how the story has gotten out. It is quite likely that Roselli is the source, Morgan the channel, and Anderson and Pearson the recipients. We may also be relieved of the need for speculation as to why the story is being told. The inference to be drawn from O'Connell's discoveries in Las Vegas is that Roselli is drinking too much and talking and that Morgan is also drinking and talking to a newspapercan friend.

Put in its best light—that there is no ulterior motive in spreading the story—it is questionable whether we are any better off now than we were before; our position may be even worse than we had suspected.

a. We may now assume that Pearson's story is not patched together from bits and pieces picked up here and there. His ultimate source, Roselli, knows more about certain details of the gambling syndicate operation than we do, and he evidently has talked. Trying now to hush up further leaks might do more harm than good; the story is already out and probably in considerable detail.

SECRET FIELD SHIP

b. The Roselli-Garrison contact in Las Vegas in March is particularly disturbing. It lends substance to reports that Castro had something to do with the Kennedy assassination in retaliation for U.S. attempts on Castro's life. We do not know that Castro actually tried to retaliate, but we do know that there were such plots against Castro. Unhappily, it now appears that Carrison may also know this.

The publicity on this subject has probably not yet run its course.

- a. Drew Pearson has not yet, as far as we know, used two of his best goodies: the story of the pills and the fact of the State Department meeting.
- b. Garrison has not yet revealed his full case. When he does, we should expect to find CIA prominently displayed.
- c. The Philippine National Bureau of Investigation has a Puerto Rican in custody who claims he participated in a Castro-inspired assassination plot in Dallas. He also claims that Castro made a speech in July 1952 threatening to try to assassinate Kennedy in retaliation for two Kennedy attempts on Castro's life. (We have found no record nor recollection of Castro having made such a speech.) The Puerto Rican is in the Philippines illegally and probably will be deported to the U.S.

We may expect the FBI to take him over and wring him dry.

We face the likelihood that things will get worse before they begin to get better. In the following paragraphs we explore some of the ramifications and discuss what night be done about them.

Should we try to silence those who are talking or might later talk?

It appears to us that this tactic offers little chance of success. For one thing, the story is already out and probably in about as full detail as it ever will be. The only participant on whom we have any real leverage is Maheu, and he has already done all of the talking he is likely to do (to his lawyer, Morgan). We have no hold on any of the others who might furnish confirmation for Roselli's story.

a. Varona is almost certainly not a friend of the Agency. Varona

As the Bay of Pigs operation developed, was one of the most critical of the lack of Cuban control of the operation and of the people involved in it. He was bitter over termination of Agency support of his exile group (and the consequent loss of his own income). The last we know of him he was in New York living a hand-to-mouth existence as a part-time auto salesman.

b. Poselli, Giancana, and Trafficunte have fallen on "evil" days. Giancana is reported (in a Chicago newspaper of recent date) to have been deposed as the Mafia head in Chicago and was removed to be hiding in Mexico. Makeu reports that Trafficante is in jail in Tampa. Roselli is persona non grata in Ias Vegas, being required to register with the police any time he is in town. None of them would have compunctions about dragging in his CIA connection when he was being pushed by law enforcement authorities. Giancana has already done it when the FAI was crowding him in 1963. Roselli appears to be doing it in his conversations with Morgan and Carrison.

(Comment: The cover story used with Roselli, Giancana, Trafficante, Varona, and presumably with Orta was that the sponsors were U.S. businessmen with interests in Cuba. Roselli soon concluded that CIA was the true sponsor and so told O'Connell. In Roselli's subsequent dealings with Harvey and Edwards he came to know this for sure. Giancana named CIA in 1963. We must assume that the others, with the possible exception of Orta and perhaps Varona, are equally sure that CIA was the true sponsor.)

c. Horgan may always retire cehind the screen of an attorneyclient relationship, as he reportedly did when the FBI approached hin on the Pearson story.

- d. Pearson, Anderson, and Greensmin (in Las Vegas) are newspapermen with a newsworthy story. Pearson has already published much of it.
- e. Makeu does have good reason for not wanting the story sired further. Unfavorable publicity might cause him to lose his lucrative client, Howard Hughes. There might be some value to be gained from endorsing his suggestion that he approach Morgan and perhaps Roselli and urge discretion.

What do other components of Government know about this operation?

Former Attorney General Robert Kennedy was fully briefed by Houston and Edwards on 7 May 1962. A memorandum confirming the oral briefing was forwarded to Kennedy on 14 May 1962. The memorandum does not use the word "assassinate," but there is little room for misinterpretation of what was meant. Presumably the original of that memorandum is still in the files of the Justice Department. It should be noted that the briefing of Kennedy was restricted to Phase One of the operation, which had ended about a year earlier. Phase Two was already under way at the time of the briefing, but Kennedy was not told of it.

As far as we know, the FBI has not been told the sensitive

- 130 -

operational details, but it would be make to assume that they have not by now put two and two together and none out with the right answer. They know of CIA's involvement with Roselli and Giancana as a result of the las Vegas wiretapping incident. From the Chicago newspaper stories of August 1963, and from Giancana's own statement, it appears that they know this related to Cuba. When Roselli's story reached them (Roselli to Morgan to Pearson to Warren to Rowley to the FBI), all of the pieces should have fallen into place. They should by now have concluded that CIA platted the assussination of Castro and used U.S. gangster elements in the operation.

There is some support for this thesis in the conversation I had with Sam Papich on 3 May 1967 when I told him of the expected meeting between Roselli and Harvey. Sam commented that Roselli and Giancana have CIA "over a barrel" because of "that operation." He said that he doubted that the FBI would be able to do anything about either Roselli or Giancana because of "their previous activities with your people."

Can we plausibly deny that we plotted with gangster elements to assassinate Castro?

No, we cannot. We are reasonably confident that there is nothing in writing outside of the Government that would confirm Pearson's story of the gardling syndicate operation, but there are plenty of non-gangster witnesses who could lead confirmation.

- a. Naheu can confirm that Shef Edwards told Roselli that Edwards had told the Attorney General of Roselli's activities on behalf of the Government.
- b. Varona and Varona's son-in-law can confirm the pill and three-man team elements of the story.
 - c. Orta can confirm the pill element of Phase One.
- d. If an independent investigation were to be ordered, the investigators could learn everything that we have learned. Such an investigation probably would uncover details unknown to us, because it would have access to the non-CIA participants.

Can CIA state or imply that it was merely an instrument of policy?

Not in this case. While it is true that Phase Two was carried out in an atmosphere of intense Kennedy administration pressure to do scmething about Castro, such is not true of the earlier phase. Phase One was initiated in August 1960 under the Eisenhower administration. Phase Two is associated in Harvey's mind with the Executive Action Capability, which reportedly was developed in response to White House urgings. Again, Phase One had been started and abandoned months before the Executive Action Capability appeared on the scene.

When Robert Kennedy was briefed on Phase One in May 1952, he strongly admonished Houston and Edwards to check with the Attorney General in advance of any future intended use of U.S. criminal elements. This was not done with respect to Phase Two, which was already well under way at the time Kennedy was briefed. The Pearson story, which is now causing us so much distress, includes one detail that is found only in Phase Two: the three-man team.

What neasures might be taken to lessen the damage?

We see little to be gained from personal approaches now to Maheu, Morgan, or Roselli. Waheu has much to lose and might be able to prevail upon Morgan and Roselli not to spread the story further. It is questionable whether any such urging would be effective with Roselli, because Roselli stands only to gain from having the story of his CIA connection known and accepted. We cannot now suppress the story, because it is already out and may boil up afresh from the Garrison case. If we were to approach any of the participants and urge discretion upon him, and if this became known, it would nevely lend credence to a tale that now sounds somewhat improbable.
