On March 31, 1971, I. Irving Davidson, a self-admitted Registered Agent for Haiti, at the United States Department of Justice, Washington, D. C. (FBI), and a Public Relations Consultant in DC, furnished the following information:

On March 26, 1971, Davidson was contacted by Luis Jose Bonilla, husband of Amparo Trujillo de Bonilla, the daughter of the late dictator of the Dominican Republic, Rafael L. Trujillo. Bonilla and his wife and the latter's mother are presently residing at 53 North Hibiscus Island, Miami Beach, Florida. In the course of their conversation, Bonilla told Davidson that officials of the United States might be interested in the following information concerning [redacted] a Dominican who presently resides in Madrid, Spain, and who has been residing in Madrid for some time. (Bonilla did not furnish address in Madrid).

Bonilla told Davidson that [redacted] had been on the payroll of the late Trujillo's son, Rafael L. Trujillo, Jr., prior to the latter's death in 1969. [redacted] while residing in Madrid, furnished information, gathered through his sources, concerning exiles from the Dominican Republic and other Latin American countries, who would be passing through Spain en route to their native countries, after having received guerrilla warfare training in Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union. Trujillo Jr. would pass this information on to government officials in the Dominican Republic.

Boninquez told Davidson that during a recent trip to Europe, he had met [redacted] (Davidson was not certain whether the meeting took place in London, England, or in Madrid). Boninquez found that [redacted] was in financial straits. Boninquez gave [redacted] $1,000.00 to assist the latter in paying off some debts. Boninquez did this as a gesture of friendship.

Boninquez told Davidson that [redacted] poses as a supporter of the former President of the Dominican Republic, Juan Bosch, but actually is a supporter of the present President, Joaquin Balaguer. Boninquez describes [redacted] as being in his early forties, and as a potential leader who has the confidence of students. Boninquez said that [redacted] has contacts with the Tupamaros, urban guerrillas who seek to overthrow the government of Uruguay, and with other revolutionary groups in Latin America. [redacted] has contacts employed by the Iberia Air Lines of Spain, and through these contacts is aware of movements of radical Dominican Republic and Latin American students entering and leaving Spain.

Boninquez expressed concern that [redacted] because of his poor financial condition, might sometime in the future, join forces with Dominican Republic extremist groups. Boninquez told Davidson that [redacted] should not be lost to the extremists. Boninquez believes that officials of the United States Government should be made aware of the above, as they might wish to get in contact with [redacted] and enlist his aid in furnishing information on student extremists.

Boninquez told Davidson that Trujillo had another source, a Captain La Chapell (spelled by Daviesen) who is presently assigned to the Embassy of the Dominican Republic in Mexico. (Davidson did not recall the first name of this individual). Boninquez stated he believes that if representatives of the United States were to contact La Chapell, the latter would be cooperative in furnishing information concerning extremist groups. Boninquez stated that unlike [redacted] La Chapell is not in financial straits.

Concerning Dominguez, Davidson stated he has been friendly with him and with his wife and the latter's mother for several years. Davidson stated he rendered some assistance on a purely humanitarian basis, and without charge of any kind, to the wife of Dominguez in 1969. At that time, Angelita Dominguez was trying to obtain a visa for her mother, who was then in Spain, to enter the United States. Davidson stated Dominguez made a social call on him on March 26, 1971, and that mention of [redacted] and La Chapell came up during the course of conversation. Davidson said he does not represent Dominguez or his wife and mother-in-law in business matters; however, there is a possibility that he may have business dealings with them in the future concerning the possible sale of a tomato processing plant in Spain owned by Mrs. Dominguez and/or her mother.

Davidson stated that he had never heard of [redacted] or La Chapell prior to his conversation with Dominguez.
