

Americans, Black and White, Shocked by Assassination

Americans — black and white — today reacted to the news of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King's assassination with shock, sorrow and prayers that the violence that led to his death would not overshadow the nonviolence he preached.

President Johnson, addressing the nation last night on radio and television, said, "I know that every American of good-will joins me in mourning the death of this outstanding leader and in praying for peace and understanding throughout the nation."

The President asked "every citizen to reject the blind violence that has struck Dr. King, who lived by nonviolence."

He said we "can achieve nothing by lawlessness and divisiveness among the American people."

"Must Find Strength"

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey gave the news of King's death to a Democratic fund-raising dinner here.

He said "the criminal act which took his life brings shame to our country. The cause for which he marched and worked must find new strength. The blight of discrimination, poverty and neglect must be erased from America."

And, he said, "an America of full freedom and equal opportunity shall be his living memorial."

Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon urged Americans "to try a new spirit of reconciliation to redeem this terrible act."

He said "The most meaningful and appropriate of all tributes (would be) a prayerful contemplation of the ghastly consequences of hatred, and a new dedication to the ideals of non-violence ... for which he stood."

"Days of Torment"

Stunned by what he called "this unspeakable crime," Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., a Negro, said "the knowledge of his enormous love must carry us through these days of torment and lift us above the strife which he gave his life to end."

King's death appeared certain to bring renewed demands for the passage of a Senate-approved civil rights bill that contains a strong open-housing provision affecting most of the nation's housing.

Several senators and congressmen urged action on the bill in their statements on King's death.

"The thing that is needed now is some positive action," said one of them, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.

King, said House Speaker John W. McCormack, D-Mass., "was a martyr to a cause—and that cause will be strengthened if the House concurs in the Senate civil rights bill."

Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., proposed a week of national mourning.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said, "His doctrine of nonviolence will overcome."

"A Tragedy for All"

Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., was campaigning in San Francisco when he heard of the assassination. He was meeting in a hotel with union leaders and called for a moment of silence.

He then issued a statement to the press saying:

"The death of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. is a tragedy for all Americans. Not only have his people lost a noble and great leader but all people, especially Americans, have lost a man of peace. We can only grieve."

Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., breaking the news to a predominantly Negro audience in Indianapolis, said, "He dedicated himself to justice and love between his fellow human beings. It's up to those of us who are here to carry out that dream."

Roy Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said King's "senseless assassination will not stay the civil rights movement; it will instead spur it to greater activity and hopefully move the American people to prompt action to expunge racism from our national life."

Whitney Young Jr., executive director of the National Urban League, said, "We fear for our country. The only possible answer now is for the nation to act immediately on what Dr. King was fighting for — the passage of the civil rights and anti-poverty bills and a true and just equality for all men."

Havana Broadcast

Rep. Charles C. Diggs Jr. of Detroit, Michigan's first Negro congressman, said, "We have just de-escalated one war and escalated another."

Stokely Carmichael, former chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, in a Havana Radio broadcast monitored in Miami, urged Negroes to stay away from their jobs to protest the slaying and "make the white racist Americans understand that Negroes have the necessary force to set right the outrages which have been made against Negroes in the United States."

James Meredith, who was shot during a 1966 voter-registration march in Mississippi, said, "this is America's answer to the peaceful, nonviolent way of obtaining rights in this country."

Floyd McKissick, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, said, "It is truly American racism."

Leontyne Price, Metropolitan Opera soprano, said, "What Dr. Martin Luther King stood for and was can never be killed with a bullet."

Montgomery, Ala. Jim Clark, the sheriff of Dallas County when King launched his Selma integration campaign there, said, "I think a man of violence died by violence. But directly and indirectly he caused every riot in the U.S. over the past 10 years. But I certainly don't go along with his being murdered."

Sen. J. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., speaking at a symposium on conflict at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, had this to say, "I do not favor violence of any kind. I hesitate to say anything bad about the dead, but I do not share a high regard for Dr. King. He pretended to be nonviolent."

"A Coward's Bullet"

Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J., said "a coward's bullet killed

King, and House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford said the act "should make all Americans feel ashamed because it is a travesty of everything America stands for."

Rep. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., said, "It is a tragedy that Dr. King has joined those men of peace who have died violent deaths. His loss is a personal sorrow to his family, his friends and his followers. But it is a grave national loss to be deprived of a voice of moderation and a preacher of nonviolence in these days of rising tensions and heedless anger."

Black and white alike broke into tears on a hundred streets in a hundred cities and towns. Thousands flocked to churches to pray. Thousands of others rioted in an expression of fury.

On a street corner in Little Rock, Ark., a Negro youth gestured hard with clenched fists. "They'll pay for it," he vowed. "They killed one of our leaders. We'll kill one of theirs. An eye for an eye."

"I hope it will quiet some of us down and do some good," said Mrs. Ruth Dotson of Chicago. "He preached and taught peace."

And in Harlem, Mrs. Joanna Ryan said, "You feel like crying away from this damned cruel world."

Welch says Ontario may tighten issuing of birth certificates

Ontario may tighten the rules for issuing birth certificates following disclosures that the alleged assassin of Rev. Martin Luther King had certificates of two Metro residents mailed to him by the Government in April.

Only one of the certificates—for Ramon George Sneyd—was apparently received by James Earl Ray, who was arrested in London last week.

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch told the Legislature yesterday that another certificate, for Paul Edward Bridgman, was returned with the envelope marked "unknown" after the Registrar-General mailed it to 102 Ossington Ave.

The request for the Bridgman certificate was received April 11, accompanied by a money order for $2, Mr. Welch said.

Another letter, signed with the name of Ramon George Sneyd, was received April 18. It too was accompanied by a money order for $2. The certificate was sent to Ramon George Sneyd at 962 Dundas St. W.

Police said Ray spent two weeks at the Ossington Avenue rooming house, arriving there April 8, four days after Dr. King was slain in Memphis.

On April 19 he moved to a Dundas Street rooming house, after applying for a passport in the name of Ramon George Sneyd. He used the name of Paul Bridgman as a reference.

Mr. Welch said he was greatly surprised by reading in yesterday's Globe and Mail that the Deputy Registrar General had said young people used false birth certificates "all the time" to obtain service in bars.

The deputy registrar—H. F. C. Humphries—had not meant to imply that young people obtained birth certificates fraudulently, Mr. Welch said.

Mr. Humphries was referring to minors borrowing or renting certificates from friends over 21.

Mr. Welch said birth certificates were not to be considered as proof of identity.

"A birth certificate is not an identification card," he said.

"I suggest that it is the responsibility of the person requiring identification at the same time requiring proof of age to satisfy himself of the identity of a person by some means other than production of a birth certificate," Mr. Welch said.

As soon as the Legislature settled for business yesterday, Opposition Leader Robert Nixon, followed by New Democratic Party leader Donald C. MacDonald, was on his feet to question Mr. Welch about birth certificate issuing procedures.

The minister said he had instructed Mr. Humphries to review the issuing procedures "with a view to finding some method which would prevent birth certificates from being obtained fraudulently."

"We must at all times," Mr. Welch added, "keep in mind that it is essential to give prompt service to the public."

The Registrar-General's office received 1,200 written requests for birth certificates daily and a further 200 personal requests at the office at 70 Lombard St., he said.

Applicants must either apply in writing or fill out a departmental form, providing the full name, the date of birth, place of birth, full name of the father and full maiden name of the mother.

Applications must be signed, or be accompanied by written authorization by the person whose name is on the certificate or the certificate is not issued, the minister said.
