Dear [REDACTED]

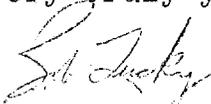

I would like to thank you for the exceptional dinner which your prepared during my visit to Washington last month. I enjoyed the company of all the guests which had taken the trouble to come. I think you have a fine crew with many diversified interests.

For your information, I am enclosing a copy of a letter from the editor of the Russian edition of Proceedings as well as a copy of a letter typical of many critical of the Targ and Puthoff paper. You might be especially interested in the comments by our Russian editor concerning changes in translation of the Targ and Puthoff paper. He feels that the references to Russian work in this paper are seriously incomplete and outdated. It is perhaps significant that this is the only time they have ever proposed changing a paper in translation. I think too that nearly every paper we publish is deficient in its reference to Soviet work, so that it is worthy of note that only in this instance are they proposing to change a paper because of this deficiency.

The other letter I have enclosed, by Calkins, is not particularly note worthy, but it is typical of a number of other letters critical of the work because of the lack of proper controls in the experiment.

Make of these what you will. I will hope to see you some time again in the future.

Very truly yours,

R. W. Lucky
