Manny:

Here's my version of the committee's assessment of the AMSAA experiment. It does not differ, in substance, from Laddie's.

The more I think about what we heard and saw, the more baffled I get. (By the way—the Professor Tart experiment, using students to guess which of ten numbers had been selected by a random number generator can be done on a TI-58. Why all the folderol about a micro computer and lights escapes me.)
