Two Cities Celebrate as 'The Lady' Presides

By Eve Zibart
Washington Post Staff Writer

O rdinarily, few cities can hold a Roman candle to Washington when it comes to Fourth of July. Fireworks blossom over the nation's monuments to freedom, and the Capitol offers its lawn for all-American music. The Star-Spangled Banner hangs threadbare but proud in the Museum of History and Technology, and picnics and parades at every point of the compass.
