1. (S/SK/SNINTEL) In response to your request for information concerning the possible description of activities (Aug 86-Aug 87) at the [REDACTED]

SG1A

a. (S/SK/WNINTEL) Source #03 stated substantially as follows: The building was tapered/slanted, curved, high with heavy doors and no perceivable windows. Inside the building there were many rooms and several levels. There was a steady whirl/hum machine sound and a strange unpleasant, pungent smell. The purpose of the building was to isolate something (not further identified). Something about the walls, perhaps something patterned, was absorbent (not further identified). Round or ring-shaped components involving segmentation/assembly (not further identified) were present in the building. Inside the the building people were observing displays (not further identified) and moving something like a control, perhaps a spherical controlling device (not further identified). The building had an overall "technical" feel. One year from now (approx. Aug 87) the effort in the building continues, but is scaled back, as if part of (its) resources have moved to another place to form "the core" of a sister agency/facility. Source #03 provided no further relevant amplifying information in response to your request.

b. (S/SK/WNINTEL) Source #18 was unable to provide any information which could be construed to be relevant to your request.

c. (S/SK/WNINTEL) Source #21 stated substantially as follows: The building was long, low, three levels above ground, and gray with a curving component on one end. Inside, the walls appeared to be seamed metal. There was artificial light inside and it was dirty, smelly and moisy. People in the building wore belted gray coveralls and were involved in scientific activity (not further identified). One year from now (approx. Sep 87) scientific activity in the building continues although the work has "advanced to prototype stage ready for testing" (not further identified). Change in direction or leadership may also be possible (not further identified). Source #21 provided no further relevant amplifying information in response to your request.

d. (S/SK/WNINTEL) Source #101 stated substantially as follows: It was a multi-story building with an underground portion (not further identified). Men/women inside dressed casually; some wore white lab coats. People were of above average intelligence, common sense and talent. They considered themselves to be elite and were divided into two main groups; "theorists and applicationists" (not further identified). Within these two major subelements there were groups or working cells who worked semi-independently. The results of their work were combined and coordinated at a higher echelon within their establishment. The nature of the work conducted in this facility was such that overall progress required each step (not further identified) to be completed before the next phase was begun. Other words provided by source #101 descriptive of the activity in this facility include: linkage, growth, combustable, shielding, shell, interaction/reaction, stress, tensil strength, contracting, heating, expanding molecules, stretching and compacting. Source #101 provided separate description of a shiny, metallic object which was rounding and elevated with an oval shape and hollow "feel". The exact purpose of this was unknown to Source #101. It was, however, reportedly related to darkness and water (not further identified). Source felt this object was associated with sparks and/or warm, gushing, bubbling water. In many of the operational work areas an abundance of pipes, valves and duct work was reported. This gave an imprssion of a plumbers shop although the actual purpose of the pipes was not discerned. In one area of this facility many of the workers were conducting activities related to a large, complex machine. The machine was metallic, with wires connecting the different areas of the device. Workers in the area of the machine, described as similar in appearance to an X-ray machine, wore masks while viewing or working around the machine. Source #101 could not determine if these protective masks were simple surgical masks or more complex, such as CBR protective masks. The purpose of this machine could not be described by Source #101. However, descriptives such as focus, lock-on, set-up, ray, shift, control and sequencing were in someway related to its functions. A movable arm was also described as being part of this machine or device. In the faciltiy there was also a device which measured "ethereal" activity or unseen energy (not further identified). Deep within the subconscious of the man who ran this machine he believes that it (the device) measures demons or demonic activity. The overall activity of the facility was to improve on something as opposed to discovering something new. One year from now (appox. Sep 87) work at the facility continues. The work has been pared down and altered and is now more channelized and regimented. Several "programs" (not further identified) have been eliminated completely while others have been pared drastically. These actions seem to be in conjunction with a new "directed" concept of work. Unimportant, unproven and unrelated work has been halted and all efforts are being focussed on narrow areas of continuing effort. Source #101 provided no further relevant amplifying information in response to your request.

e. (S/SK/WNINTEL) None of the SUN STREAK Sources reported any hostile/sabotage activity in association with [REDACTED] Although they were never asked directly if such activity would occur, it is assumed that if such activity were to occur it would be detected and reported by SUN STREAK sources given adequate target acquisition and resolution.
