SUMMARY OF INFORMATION:

1. Describe the target site: The site is a relatively quiet, dedicated public place. It has grass and paved walkways. It is situated between a public thoroughfare and another, more active public area (see overhead sketch, page 8). The quiet area is separated from the more active area by trees.

The more active area has a number of large, oddly shaped structures which can be seen over the trees from the quiet area (see sketch, page 7). I managed to go into one of the structures. It is very large and open inside, with long, straight rows of what appear to be counters.

One particular structure is very tall and cylindrical. I could not tell whether this structure was in the quiet area or the more active area. It appears to have large blue or green areas which are surrounded by white lines (one level of these is shown in sketch, bottom of page 1).

2. Describe the key activity at the target site: Both areas are public access areas. The key activity in the quiet area consists of people walking, sitting, and being quiet. There is a "nice" feeling about this area.

The key activity in the more active area consists of a much greater number of people walking about, looking, riding in low vehicles, and going between the oddly-shaped structures. There appeared to be many children in this area. One person was pushing something around which was low and had an angled handle on it, much the general shape of a lawn mower, but larger (about the size of a baby carriage).

3. Other perceptions: There was a definite perception that a body of water is a major gestalt of this site, but I could not get any clear details on what the association might be.
