SUMMARY OF INFORMATION

At this time, there is no imminent threat to US and coalition forces in the Middle East.

Hussein will try to alleviate his problems thru negotiations. Hussein currently feels and thinks that he will be able to get what he wants thru negotiations. Even though Hussein will be thinking and feeling this way for the next three to five weeks, conditions and circumstances will still be intense for US and coalition forces.

More hostages will be coming out of Kuwait in the November time frame.

Kuwait will lose politically and economically when this crises is over. The old regime of Kuwait will not return.

Egypt is a prime negotiating force in this crises and there are some factions within the Egyptian government that want more democracy in the region.

Most of the current thrust of the situation is now at the United Nations Judicial system.

The name "camaru/kamaru" phonetically surfaced.
