Location of cocaine: About 1000 miles West of San Francisco. It is travelling in an easterly direction toward San Fran at a point located SW of Monterrey Bay. It changes course and heads SE paralleling the coastline. It stops in the area known as the Separation Zone, located between the north/south traffic lanes south of Port Hueneme. It will then head northwest towards Santa Barbara. Cocaine is in a shiny container in a compartment on the starboard side below the anchor chain compartment. As you enter that compartment, the cocaine is left of center within a recessed area. There is a metal gangplank that leads to this compartment.

The drugs are colocated on land at sea level. Two locations: an area around San Clemente near Camp Pendleton at 33N 117W, and in the area of Half Moon Bay. Supposedly four men are now searching to find the location of the drugs.
