SG1A

00B: (311146 JUL 90) The "[REDACTED]" recently picked up drugs and is presently carrying these drugs in a horizontal compartment located under the stern decking. There was an impression that either they or the drugs already on board are presently being exposed to sea water, probably unknown to the people aboard. The drugs picked up appear to belong to a middle-aged woman who is on board, and appears physically unfit for the trip. The owner of the vessel evidently decided "in for a penny, in for a pound", and decided that if he got caught with his own drugs, it would not matter if he had someone else's on board, too. If he makes it undetected, he will be all that much better off for having two loads aboard. The destination is planned for the Texas coast, either Brownsville or Galveston.

SG1A

00G: 087 1100-1200 The [REDACTED] is not carrying drugs and is currently located at 23 N - 87 W above the Yucatan Channel. It is going to the coast of Antonio, Texas (28 N 96 W) in the Gulf of Mexico for small business reasons.

00F: (311306 JUL 90) The S/V suspected of being C/S [REDACTED] is presently located at 22 00 N 89 54 W. It's final destination is somewhere within the middle Florida Keys within the vicinity of Marathon Key. I could not ascertain if the vessel is carrying drugs per se but it is carrying a number of large, pillow shaped objects wrapped with shiny white plastic-like material. These objects are stacked together below deck and towards the rear of the vessel.

OOD: 311355L July 90

The sailing vessel is now located at 18 N 86 15'W. It is carrying a large load of cocaine. The drugs are stored within the hull of the vessel, towards the rear, covered up and made to look like part of the vessel itself. A possible destination is New Orleans, Louisiana. Something about this vessel and/or operation is "special". A possible name associated with this target is "Sinbad".

Tasker JT4-087-90 (31 Jul 90) SG1A

Target: 33 foot S/V (described in [REDACTED] case 676) SG1A

Background: The 33 foot S/V described in the case as [REDACTED] possibly picked up a load of drugs in the past three days. It is probably enroute to, or through, the Yucatan Channel to a location on the Gulf Coast of U.S. It is unclear whether this S/V is C/S [REDACTED] and whether it is actually carrying drugs.

EEl:

1. Where is the S/V now?
2. Is it carrying drugs?
3. What is its destination/intention?
4. Provide any associated information available? (concentrate on operational details, attempting to get a name or callsign, if possible).
