The target is in a location where people work and is near water. Scientific data and computers can be found around the site. The target itself is a big object on display which is dark, slender, angular, greater in length than in width, and built for people. There are more than one of these objects in existence. A pool of water is in the area which has a lot of concrete and metal. There is a structure at this place which has compartmented areas and security can be an issue. People can walk around outside the surrounding area to see the targeted object. The object is big, has energy associated with it, and is by water. The object is raised above the ground, angled upward, and positioned from low to high. It is now in an inactive state with no motion. It is composed of silver gray matter and once moved in a south western direction. The targeted object's surroundings include: water, a structure, and yards/fields. The targeted object is "in memory of" a past event or era.
