Even though vessel is involved, contraband may not necessarily be drug oriented.

E. SESSION SUMMARY:

The target is a rather well-to-do merchant. He is originally from south central Asia; maybe extreme northern India/Himalayan region. However, he is now operating in a location east and south of his origin. I sense that it is a place with a heavy Muslim concentration reminiscent of Malaysia or Indonesia.

His business deals with shiny objects used for decorating houses or buildings; like cut glass or polished metal. These objects are not considered "fine art" but are pleasing to look at none the same. He deals with extremely large quantities of these objects. I sense that his main base of operation is either on, or very near, a major body of water. I sense a lot of people running around moving large bundles. It is very dusty and the air is "heavy".

There is a group of workers who are involved with special wrapping/packing; actually the concept of a "group within a group". They work separately from everyone else. The sense is that they are handling a material that is dark colored, thicker than tar, somewhat malleable and has a sweet, pungent smell. This material is in "blocks" about the size of 4 to 6 clinched fists.

The target is receiving this material from individuals who are somehow obscurely related; either through marriage or some complex cultural kinship system. These individuals are in a very mountainous yet dry (almost like the "steppes" of southern Russia) region.
