- E. SESSION SUMMARY:

The target is a large, sleek white colored vessel with bright blue trim. It is extremely fast. It's bow is steeply angled and it cuts through the water in a dramatic manner.

There has been some recent repairs made to the target; to repair a large gash in the hull. There is an image of large, jagged, square-shaped damage as if a section of the boat had been sheared off. There is also a sense that the target has had some changes made to its original design; something associated with detection or sensing. The power of the target has been altered as well.

Contradictory sense of bellowing fabric with that of a high speed prop spinning through water.

The following concepts, objects and/or features were perceived to be associated with this target:

- the numbers 741 or 417.
- oblong wooden crates with unusually thick sides.
- the image of individual fish packed in tubes; the tubes, in turn, are packed and supported by a white, foamy material on either end. These are then secured into blocks which are cubed-shaped.

- the design or configuration of an on-board toilet is not typical of this vessel.

- large cylinders with heavy rope wound around them.

- a wooden gazebo-type structure located at the end of a long walkway which is suspended above the water.

- old, leather bound books and an elaborately ornate wooden chest.

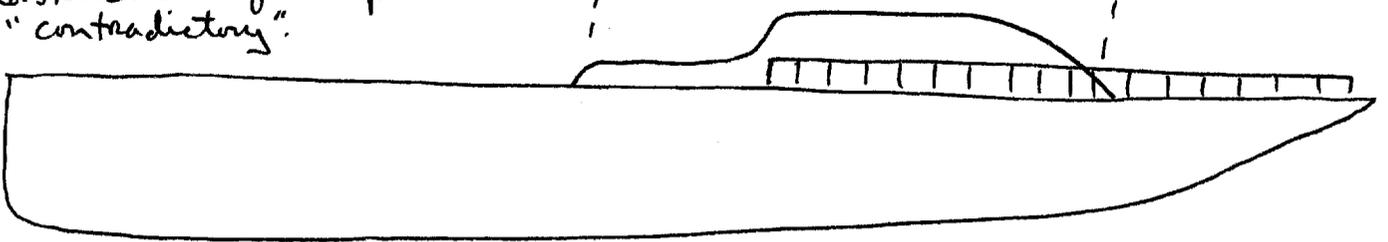

- a man performing a cranking action; adjusting rope.

- a circular, flat disc which slowly rotates; this feels foreign or out-of-place on the target.

SG1A - the name [REDACTED] as both name and call sign.

- a large, cone-shaped object reminiscent of a dip net or "collection" apparatus used for collecting small bait animals.
