E. SESSION SUMMARY: ^{SG1B}

The target [REDACTED] is associated with fish, either commercial or sports; however, it also feels like a combination of both. The target has a "trawler-like" appearance but its bow seems more like a sports fishing vessel. This makes it feel as if it is also involved with another type of fishing activity.

The target is currently in trouble; it is being pounded by water. It seems to be turned in the wrong direction to handle the weather/waves/surf conditions (i.e. facing shore). The target appears outwardly abandoned but is occupied. It is stationary and bobbing in pretty rough water right now.

An area where high, steep terrain meets "frothy" water is within view of the target. There is a long, gently rising point of sand or bare land which juts out into the water away from the steep terrain. This feature extends for a long ways (see overhead terrain sketch map, page 5). A road or "jeep trail" occurs on top of this steep terrain and follows the edge of the "drop-off" (see sketch, page 4).

The target is involved with illegal activities concerning fishing. There is a sense that "the wrong kinds of animals are being killed or exploited". These animals are reminiscent of sea mammals (i.e. non-fish type animals). The target is involved with illegal contraband. The target has carried long, white and curved objects which "feel" animal in origin. However, the target feels as if it is about to become "dirty" in another, unperceived, way.

There is the sense that the target is off of the western coast of northern part of Central America but at the same time, feels associated with an area north of Washington state; possibly the Alaska/British Columbia border. It is anchored close to an isolated and rugged shoreline.

Other associated features, concepts or perceptions relating to this target (to include those depicted by sketches) include:

- something abnormal about the hull; there are extra angles, points and/or curved projections extending out from the side of the target.

- a feature reminiscent of a sort of folding "chute" attached to an interior wall of the target.

- rippling slats of wood.

- a large reel of parachute-type cord.

- the presence of weapons or objects associated with weapons (see sketches, page 2b & 2c). These are associated with a large, green wooden box which appears attached to the wall and floor and located amidship on the starboard side.

- an individual is walking in standing water in a lower level of the vessel. There is a lot of water coming in due to the action of the water. There is a ladder located on the port side of the vessel in this location.

- the "holding" section of the vessel is exposed and is currently either empty or is not "holding" or containing what it is intended to hold.

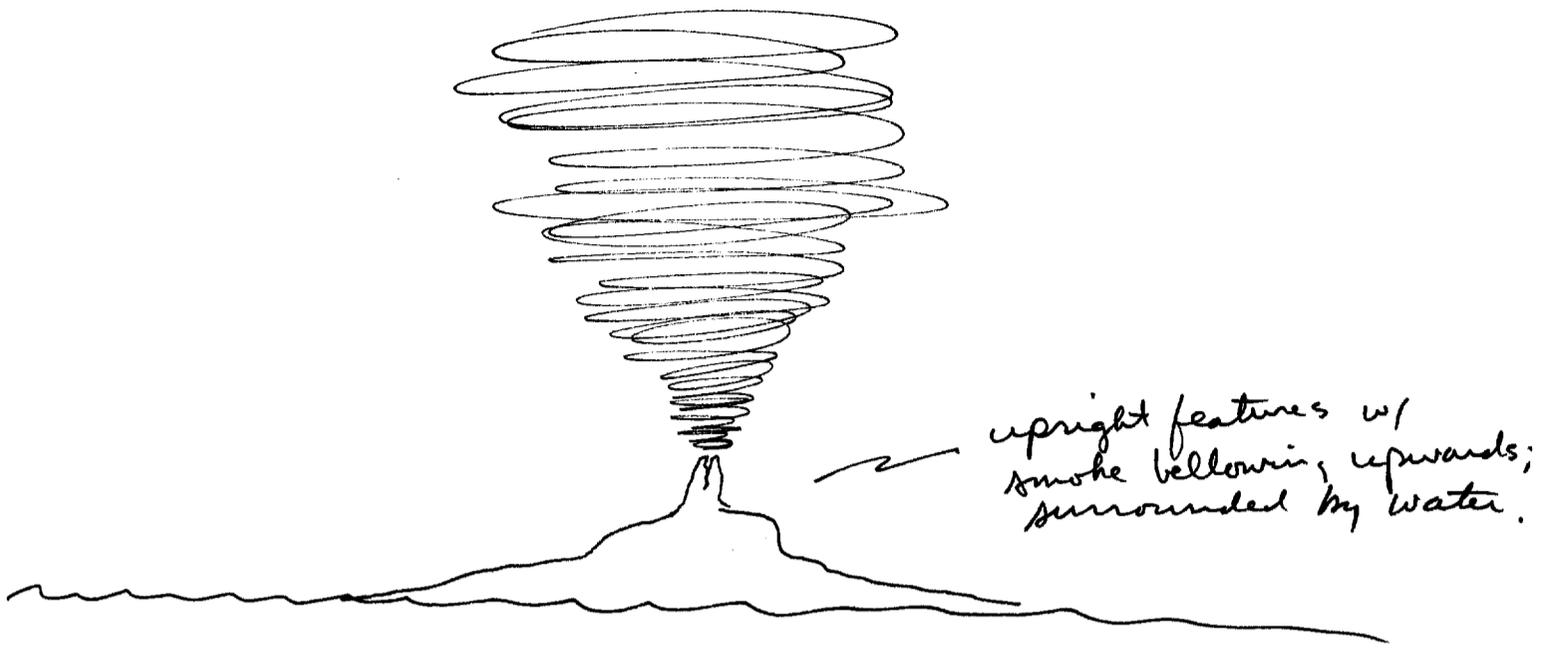

- the concept of "3 weeks" is important.

- there are flat, layered objects which have been "sandwiched" tightly together.

- there is a platform-like feature associated with "standing" which extends out over the bow of the vessel.

- there is a large opening through a box-like feature which provides access both "in and out" of the vessel's interior area.

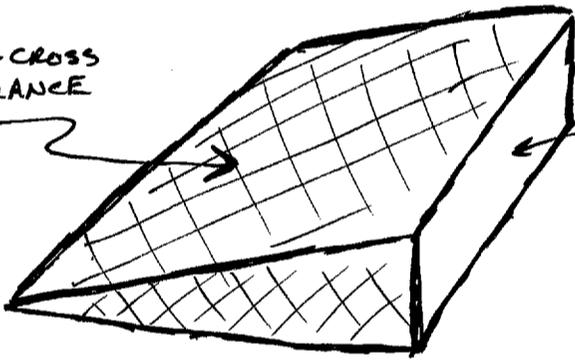

- there are one or two slanted "booms" which extend out over the stern.

(c)

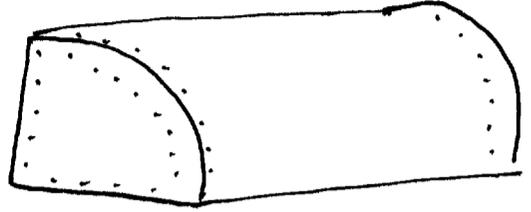

- large, cylindrical shaped object; opens along one side; a smaller, cylinder-like object is slid into the opening;
- "feels" like some sort of "contained" combustion.

Target is located near an area where there is steep, high terrain overlooking water.

overhead view

outline of steep terrain where it meets water

* long, gently rising sand or land; bare; juts out into water for a long way.

* This feature is within view of target at its current location

- Side view -

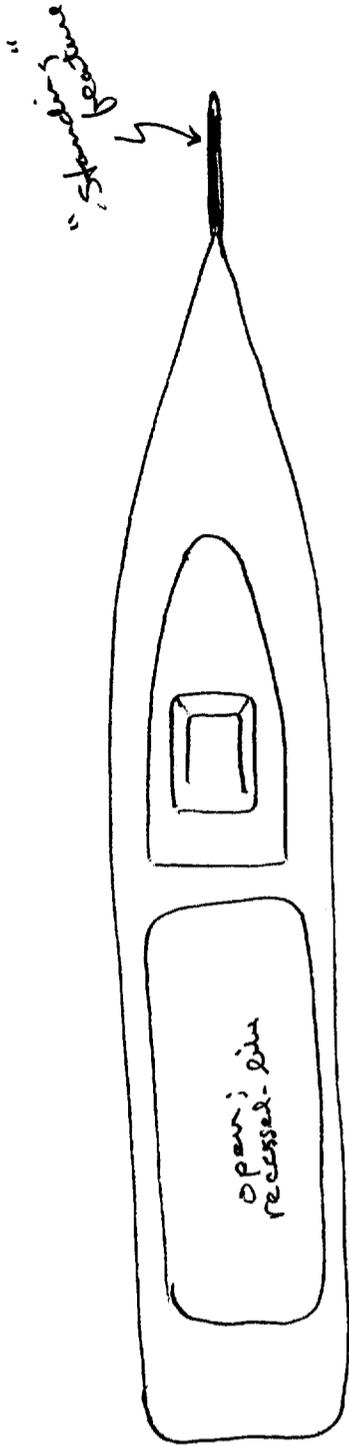

one or two long "beams"

more slanted

- seems more narrow than normal (width wise)

Overhead - View

- * Seems abnormally narrow; extremely pointed bow w/ "standin; feature" extending out from bow
- * ~~not~~ associated w/ fish; either comment on Motes; combination of both.
