

Summary of Information

The target consists of a larger structure with stone steps which has fallen into a deteriorated state through overuse or disuse. There is a lofty, monumental aspect to this structure. There are, or were, numerous small wooden shelters associated with this larger structure. The target sets in an area of old lush forest with earthy smells, moss covered objects, a "richness of nature", wet soil and a "communing" with Mother Earth. It is a serene place with running water nearby.

There is the feeling of a coastline with steep and tall cliffs. There is a scene reminiscent of an old castle near the edge. There is a real feeling of a "time warp" here. There is an old time English or Scottish "flavor" to this. It almost makes one feel as if they are in the "time of Robin Hood".

Another part of the target has large, dark circles or spots. These are reminiscent of the holes (shafts) of an old mining operation. There is a noticeable wind or breeze associated with these spots. From 250' overhead is seen a series of concentric circles within a field of green.

As one looks at the modern day appearance of the target, you get the feeling like you are being taken back in time. It causes one to have melancholy memories. One sees or feels a festive or gala aspect to the site. A time when the target was "full of life". There was music and horns. A throng or gathering of people was there; almost a feeling of a rendezvous of some sort. There are bright colors.

There is a feeling of primitive, primordial and pre-technology associated with this target. There is the concept of the importance of lumber or wooden objects here. One object in particular is tilting or leaning to one side.

There is the perception of a mill worker wearing very coarsely woven clothes. He is involved with a process that transfers energy. This activity is associated with running water. There are stacks of flat, rectangular objects setting on edge. There is an object that appears as a cut log with a trough cut into the length of it along one side (see diagram). There are dark areas without a bottom nearby. These spots are hollow, damp and dangerous.

There is a sound of the movement of small rocks or gravel. There are numerous "dark" corners. There is a small room (see diagram) with sparse wooden furnishings. The individual who lived here had a "spartan" existence. This individual is associated with that previously stated in this summary. He has worked hard. The work was too hard for his physical capabilities but he did not have a choice. He was sad, but proud and never showed his emotions to the outside. There is the concept of "indentured servitude" associated with this individual.

There is a controlled movement of liquid. This liquid feels as if it is produced from the pressing down hard on something.

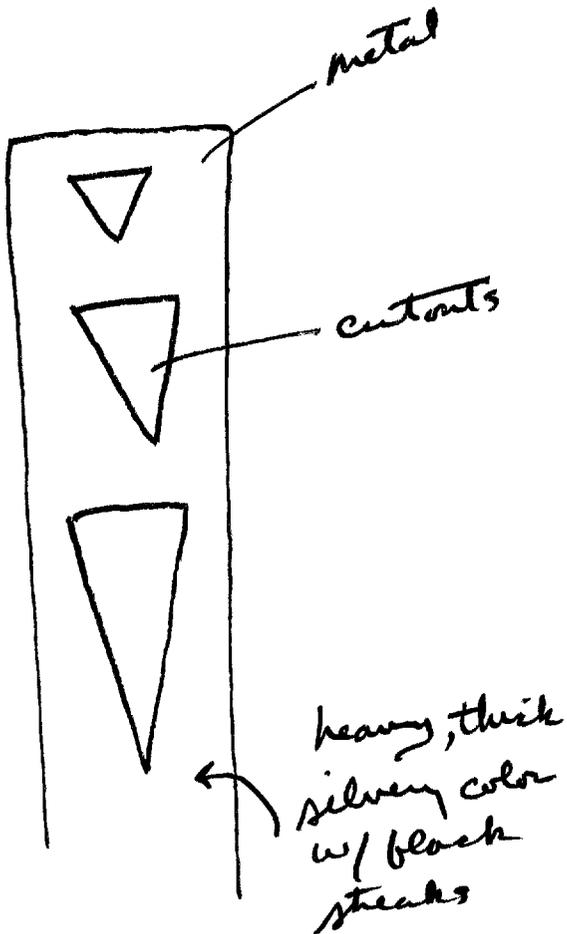

Elsewhere, there are vaulted arches associated with a star-like figure within a circle.
