

Floating world of the Uru

BOUNTIFUL AND BUOYANT, totora reeds from Titicaca's shallows supply the Uru with material for homes and boats. Reeds even provide the "ground" these fisherfolk walk on, since they live on floating islands (above). As bottom layers rot, the Indians spread new layers on top.

Seated on the spongy surface (left), an Uru woman grinds barley for making gruel or mush.

Like the Aymaras, the Uru learned the art from the Indians who crossed the Andes on papyrus. Aymaras from the north learned the art from the Aymaras (see the January 1971 issue).

This document is made available through the declassification efforts and research of John Greenewald, Jr., creator of:

The Black Vault

The Black Vault is the largest online Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) document clearinghouse in the world. The research efforts here are responsible for the declassification of hundreds of thousands of pages released by the U.S. Government & Military.

Discover the Truth at: <http://www.theblackvault.com>